Big Changes On The Farm Front

New Face Of Nutrient Management Planning Could Be Phosphorus In Act 6 Revisions

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE
Lancaster Farming Staff

Editor's note: Farmers will soon face new challenges as they begin to cope with changes to the state's Nutrent Management Law. This two-part series will explore those changes.

Part 1 of 2

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — When Pennsylvania embarked on its first nutrient management law in 1993, it was noted as a major breakthrough. Pennsylvania became one of the first states to implement a Nutrient Management Act.

Since its official implementation in 1997, the law — a challenge on all fronts to farm owners and land managers — has come up for review. In the proposed changes, it includes a switch from a nitrogen-based plan (N-based) to a phosphorus-based plan (P-based). In Pennsylvania, the selected method of phosphorus management will be through the Phosphorus Index (P-Index).

The State Conservation Commission is charged with the administration of Act 6 and review of the current law and the recommended changes to be made.

Doug Goodlander of the State Conservation Commission said the decision to move to a P-Index was one that was carefully evaluated between several options available to manage phosphorus on a farm.

Goodlander stresses that the majority of soil loss, the major transport mechanism for phosphorus, is handled through a farm's conservation plan. "But there are certain situations on certain farms that erosion controls will not control the phosphorus. The commission is trying to find those situations and trying to address them."

A study commissioned by the State Conservation Commission at Penn State found the P-Index the most economical way to handle phosphorus on a farm and

Centre County Conducts Farm-City Banquet

ASHLEY D. BIRD
Special To Lancaster Farming

SPRING MILLS (Centre Co.) — On Thursday, Oct. 30 members of the farm and urban community of Centre County attended the 2003 Farm-City Banquet here at the Penns Valley Area High School.

Festivities began at 6 p.m. with a hospitality bar comprised of different kinds of cheese, crackers, and a mild punch. The bar was served by Ashley Bird, 2003-2004 Centre County Dairy Princess and sponsored by the Centre County Dairy Promotion Committee. Guests were then treated to a delicious ham and turkey dinner served by the Penns Valley Band Boosters.

Approximately 175 people attended the banquet and enjoyed listening to several speakers for the evening. In the audience for the evening were Pennsylvania state officials, politicians, county officials, and other community leaders

Master of Ceremonies was Kathleen Matason, past president of the Kiwanis Club of State College and director of operations at Ben Franklin Technology Partnership. Matason welcomed everyone and introduced Dr. Richard Deitrich, spiritual life director at Spring Creek Presbyterian Church. Deitrich gave the invocation and presented the entertainment as an Elvis impersonator singing several Elvis Presley songs.

Don Robinson Reflects On 36-Year Career In Lancaster County Agriculture

LOU ANN GOOD

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The name "Don Robinson" is a familiar one to Lancaster County's ag community. For 26 years, he headed the adult farmer instructor program for Eastern Lancaster County School District, and for the past 10 years the Lancaster County Conservation District (LCCD).

Robinson, 65 years old and successfully recovered from heart and prostate problems, plans to retire at the end of this year. The event causes him and others to reflect on a career that has touched so many lives.

Robinson's hands-on technical help with individual farmers included developing farm management skills, soil testing, fertilization, weed control, crop management, balancing feed rations, forage analysis, record keeping, tax management, farm business analysis, and more. This work provided a strong background for his duties as district administrator for LCCD to oversee conservation of soil, water, and other natural resources.

Robinson's agriculture career is quite surprising, considering he grew up in suburban Philadelphia with no farming background.

"In high school, I took an ag

Compared to last Thursday, slaughter steers sold a full 1 00-2 00 higher Kosher demand was very good as a nice offering of high quality cattle were on offer, with packer demand only moderate It is still hard to break 400 head at a slaughter steer sale in Lancaster County, and whoever got all the hard-fed cattle into town for this Thursday's sale had to turn over a lot of rocks to find them The Northeastern finished market was going against the grain on Thursday as there were very few live cattle sales reported as of Thursday afternoon in the Midwestern states, and the few feedlots that were moving cattle were doing so at a steady to weak level at mostly 105 00 live Many packers have slowed chain speeds down to a crawl, and are not running on Saturdays to try and stockpile some supplies to get the price of their live cattle down Maybe its working, as Thursday's boxed beef cutout values were from 1 33-2 20 lower with the Choice cutout from 165 00-167 00, this marks several consecutive days that meat markets have been lower The Chicago Mercantile Exchange has not been farmer-friendly either this week after a couple days of limit-down losses, with spot November closing down 90 on Thursday at 100 30 What is even more interesting is the discount the nearby spot December contract has on the cash trade It closed at 94 82 on Thursday, which is a full 10 00 lower than current cash levels Either the Board or the finished prices are going to have to make an adjustment fairly soon, as the end of November is only a couple weeks away. The Holstein steer run was light, and to mixed to test in New Holland on Thursday Slaughter heifers sold mostly steady Fleshy slaughter cows sold 3.00-6 00 higher, with Lean cows trending steady 1 50 higher in very active trading as some packers are increasing their cow kills, to offset their lack of steer supplies A good run of slaughter bulls sold steady to 3 00 higher The supply included 351 head of slaughter steers, 92 head of slaughter heifers, 566 head of slaughter cows, 91 head of slaughter bulls, with 256 head of feeder cattle

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
November 12, 2003
Report Supplied by USDA

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices. .8700-.9300. Class III, spot prices 1.2000-1 3000.

EDITOR'S NOTE. Due to changes in milk supply agreements, milk import/export totals are not directly comparable to year ago figures and to shipments prior to April 1, 2003

Milk production ranges from steady to slightly heavier Most of the gains in the milk flow have been reported in the Southeast with most states showing slight increases. In the Middle Atlantic and Northeast, milk output is about steady and typical for November. Fluid milk supplies are tight, occasionally short of needs Bottlers that were affected by the recent strike are getting back to more normal operations, but most of the stores that were affected in the East are reportedly back to work. Florida's need for milk did increase this week as their local milk production did dip over the weekend and demand increased. Contacts report that milk buyers are looking ahead and placing orders for Thanksgiving needs. Bottlers in all sections of the East expect improved demand next week This would be typical for this time of year Contacts also report a very tight supply situation for surplus milk. Demand is good and premiums are being paid for any spot loads that are available. Manufacturers are reducing plant schedules as milk supplies dwindle. Some cheese makers who typically have regional and national promotions to supply are aggressively looking for more milk.

The condensed skim market is little changed. Supplies remain tight. Contracts are clearing most of the available supply.

The fluid cream market is very firm Offerings are tight at all levels of the market. It seems that "everyone" wants more cream. Some suppliers do not have enough milk coming into their plants to fill their cream needs. They are finding it more difficult and expensive to buy supplemental loads to meet all their needs. In instances, customers have been shorted a load or two and they then have to go out on the spot market looking for cream. Spot prices are steady to higher. The CME weekly average for AA held steady but multiples did often move higher, particularly at the upper end of the range. Production of holiday items like bottled cream, dips, egg nog, half & half, etc. are all on the rise, which only adds to the firm market Ice cream production is holding relatively steady despite the time of year. Churning activity is limited and many butter makers would like more cream

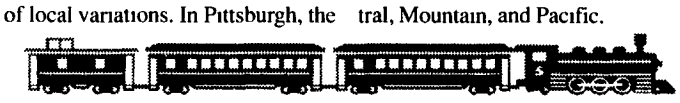
Travel in Time

Traveling by rail in the "good old days" was not always so good. Each railroad scheduled arrivals and departures for particular cities, but each city set its own time (usually based on the Sun's position over city hall). On arrival, travelers didn't know if they were "on time" or not, because of local variations. In Pittsburgh, the city had its official time, but each of the six railroads and the Allegheny Observatory each had its own time, too. The railroads themselves used 101 different times nationwide. That changed on November 18, 1883, when the railroads adopted the four time zones we know as Eastern, Central, Mountain, and Pacific.



Easy Pot Roast

1 chuck roast (3 pounds)
1 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup catsup
1/4 cup Worcestershire sauce
2 tbsp. brown sugar
2 tbsp. cider vinegar
1 tsp. salt

Brown roast in hot oil in a Dutch oven; remove and set aside. Sauté onion in pan drippings until translucent. Return meat to pan. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over the roast. Cover tightly and simmer for 2½ to 3 hours or until meat is tender. MAKES 8 TO 10 SERVINGS.

OPINION

Closer To Your Environment

A couple of weeks ago, Lancaster Farming staff attended the 2003 fall Continuing Education Seminar for certified crop advisers (CCAs) at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

The buzz: pretty soon, maybe late in 2004, farmers will be seeing a completely renovated Pennsylvania Nutrient Management Law.

In 1996, the first Nutrient Management Law for Pennsylvania was enacted. The law's purpose: get the streams and Chesapeake Bay watershed free of nitrogen. The plan: make it as simple as a one-page sheet like Maryland, and have the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) administer it.

In stories which we publish this week, we learn from several that we've ventured far — perhaps too far — from that simple, straightforward, workable plan, in which the State Conservation Commission oversees while the PDA does the legwork.

Now, perhaps late this year or early next, a new, renovated law will take the place of the nitrogen, or N-based plan, that's been with us for about a decade.

Farmers are concerned.

They should be.

The plan is going to make land managers more aware of their property than they ever were before, or thought possible.

As a farm field manager, you will have to know how water behaves on your land. You will be required to have a conservation plan and actually put that plan in place. You will have to follow a phosphorous index, or a way to place your phosphorous-laden manure on that doesn't leach out into streams or run off and pollute the water table. The site index will restrict where that manure can be placed, and it will affect all farms in a big way.

First there will be a public review and comment period. Those dates will be posted in our Farm Calendar starting this page.

At the fall CCA meeting, Peter Kleinman, Penn State/USDA, made it

Editor:

Did you attend a Veterans' Day service this week? If you weren't able to, it's not too late to honor our veterans. We can and should remember those men and women who have guarded this nation for generations on more than one day set aside each year. We should make it a routine to spend some time each month or even each week finding ways to pay tribute to our veterans.

Now the torch has been passed to a new generation of veterans. We have again called on our servicemen and women to take up arms in defense of our nation. But it is a defense like no other in our country's history.

It is a defense against faceless fanatics who value death and destruction above all else — including their own lives.

We fought battles on the desert soil of Iraq and won the war, ousting one of the world's worst dictators who for years has threatened the world with the horrors of terrorism. We freed a

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Check And Winterize Your Poultry Housing

Cold weather has arrived in the region and there are several things that should be done at this time to prepare your poultry houses for winter operations.

Penn State Regional Poultry agent Gregory Martin points out that cleaning your fans is more important now than at any other time. Since fewer fans will be running during the winter, it is important that they run in optimal condition in order to provide adequate air exchange and drying of litter and manure.

Since most fans are run in combination with some sort of shutters, it is vital that these are cleaned and checked as well. Poorly operating louvers/shutters will leak cold air back into the poultry house and will create cold spots within a house.

Watering systems will need to be examined as well, since the removal of wet manure and litter because of water leaks would be hampered at times by climatic conditions. Be sure that water supply pipes and manifolds are properly insulated or are placed in insulated rooms to prevent pipes from bursting and to insure that proportioners, pressure regulators, and other watering appliances are in working order during cold weather.

A quick check of the roof and the truss system should be made to ensure that there are no sagging or broken timbers in the roof that could fail under a snow or wind load. This also includes a check of the roofing as well to repair loose-fitting roofing that may be lost in high wind conditions. The addition of snow jacks or other snow diverting devices should be placed above fan nacelles and other equipment that would be damaged by snow dropping off the roof.

Gutters should be free of debris that could restrict rainwater from being carried away from the building. Water near an exterior wall can "wick" under a wall and cause problems under severe conditions. All drainage for the housing should be examined to be sure all water flows would move as planned and unimpeded.

A review of electrical systems, including the servicing of generators, emergency lights, and alarms should be done at this time, as power interruptions can occur during heavy snow and rain. Alarm sensors and systems should be tested if auto diagnostics are not part of the system. Battery backups to these systems (if installed) should be checked and replaced as directed by the manufacturer.

Finally, access roads especially for the feed trucks should be maintained or repaired. This includes the additional application of crushed stone or gravel or the regrading of the road to ensure proper drainage of water away from the road. Asphalt paved roads should be top-sealed at this time. Locks to gates should be examined and lubricated to prevent freezing and rust accumulation. Signage should be easy to read and clearly visible.

With these steps in place, we hope the downtime due to systems failures will be minimized. The small investment in time early may help reduce the potential loss from system failure.

To Be Aware Of The Northeastern Integrated Pest Management Center

Penn State and Cornell University will share a four-year, $4.3 million grant from the USDA to jointly administer the Northeastern Integrated Pest Management Center.

Established in 2000, the Northeastern IPM Center promotes practical pest management solutions for urban and rural settings in Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, West Virginia, the New England states, and the District of Columbia. The grant represents a 44 percent annual increase over the center's previous level of funding.

The center, one of four regional IPM centers across the country, is the hub for a network of university researchers and extension specialists and serves as a clearinghouse for print and electronic information supporting the adoption of IPM. Integrated pest management aims to manage pests — such as insects, diseases, weeds, and animals — by combining physical, biological, and chemical tactics that are safe, profitable, and environmentally compatible.

The Northeastern IPM Center's co-directors are John Ayers, professor of plant pathology and director of Penn State's Pesticide Education Program, and James VanKirk, Cornell senior extension associate. VanKirk oversees daily operations of the center.

"The increase in funding will enable us to develop new programs and enhance support for users of pest management information, including farmers, nursery operators, park and turf managers, building superintendents, pest control operators, homeowners, gardeners, and others," Ayers said. "The center will continue to facilitate communication among these groups and others with a stake in pest management policy and implementation, such as consumer and environmental organizations, governmental regulatory agencies, researchers, and educators."

New initiatives will include competitive grants programs to support the development of IPM planning tools, the creation of new IPM publications, and the establishment of IPM research or extension projects. In addition, the center will organize a new biannual conference for those in the region with an interest in IPM issues. The conference will help prioritize IPM needs and promote new collaborations among participating institutions.

Quote Of The Week:

"I don't know what your destiny will be, but one thing I know: the only ones among you who will be really happy are those who will have sought and found how to serve."

WE SHALL OVERCOME

Background Scripture:
1 John 5.
Devotional Reading:
Romans 5:1-11.

One of the most memorable experiences of my life was to join in one of Martin Luther King's marches on Washington. I don't recall much of what was said that day, but I remember vividly our singing of:

We shall overcome;
We shall overcome;
We shall overcome some day.
Oh, deep in my heart
I do believe that
We shall overcome some day.

This song was a testimony not to our own prowess, but of faith in God to someday overcome the irrational violence to which the world seemed committed. We did not expect that all this "overcoming" would take place immediately, nor maybe even in our lifetimes. But we were convinced that God would overcome and we identified ourselves with that victory. We were living in the power of the victory that was yet to come.

Where's The Evidence?

Some three decades later, we have seen some good changes, but the world is still baldly resistant to the kingdom of God. When in my daily newspaper I read of the inhumanities and evil that still prevail in the world, as well as a seeming worldwide indifference to these realities, I sometimes forget that "we shall overcome" because God will overcome.

It is human to want to have some evidence that God's kingdom will finally prevail, but 1 John 5 suggests that we tend to look in the wrong places for that evidence. (I confess that I find 1 John's style, particularly in this fifth chapter, awkward and difficult. I've read it many times before I began to find it helpful.)

"For whatever is born of God overcomes the world; and this is the victory that overcomes the world, our faith. Who is it that overcomes the world but he who believes that Jesus is the Son of God?" (5:4,5). I will not likely find evidence in my daily newspaper that "we will overcome." Nor will I find that evidence in ecclesiastical statistics or anywhere else. The evidence is not "out there" but inside me. "Our faith" of which 1 John speaks is an "inside job."

"He who believes in the Son of God has the testimony in himself" (5:10a). What is this "testimony" that Christ's disciple finds "in himself"?

"And this is the testimony, that God gave us eternal life, and this life is in his Son." Standing alone, this verse suggests that the testimony is the promise of eternal life after death. It is that, but it is much more, for 1 John 5 speaks not just of what is to come after death, but before: "He who has the Son has life; he who has not the Son of God has not life."

Eternal Life Now!

So eternal life does not start when I die, but I can experience it here and now. The experience of that eternal life in Christ is something I know, not from outside evidence, but from evidence within.

What is that evidence but the inner assurance that "we will overcome" with God? We have not seen the victory with our physical eyes, but with the inner eyes of our faith.

I know that may not sound very evidential! It is human to want to have it in black and white, carved in stone with a lifetime guarantee. But in my lifetime I have seen the failure of so many things that have been printed in black and white, carved in stone, and experienced the failure of lifetime guarantees, that I have come to realize that the only assurance is that of trusting God.

1 John 5 concludes with this counsel: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols" (5:21). If we think in terms of the idols that the writer of 1 John confronted, his advice seems terribly out of date. But an idol is anything that rivals God and thus our world is still full of idols. So let us keep from anything that rivals God, so that by our faith we may still with God "overcome the world"!

DAIRY PRODUCTS REPORT RELEASED

- Dairy components allocated to cheese.
- Butter production down.
- Cash cheese prices weaken.

USDA released the Dairy Products report this week. It shows how milk components were allocated to the production of dairy products for the month of September 2003. Overall it shows more components were allocated to cheese production and less to butter and nonfat dry milk. If this trend continues, expect lower stocks of butter in early 2004 and more of cheese.

One would expect overall dairy processing to be down relative to a year ago since milk production is lower. For the month of September, USDA estimated U.S. milk production was 13.4 billion pounds. On a daily average basis, the September U.S. milk supply fell 0.5 percent relative to a year ago.

According to my calculations for the month of September, the Dairy Products report shows a one percent growth in the amount of protein and other dairy solids components going into manufactured dairy products, and a 4.2 percent drop in butterfat use.

Butter and nonfat dry milk for September 2003 fell 21.6 and 8.9 percent, respectively, from a year ago. This is the second month of significant declines in butter and nonfat dry milk production. For the period January through September, cumulative butter and nonfat dry milk production fell 7.9 and 6.3 percent, respectively.

On the other hand, total cheese production in September grew 3.3 percent relative to a year ago. Cumulative total cheese production through September 2003 grew 0.4 percent. In the cheese category, growth is mainly coming from the production of Italian cheeses, which was up 4.7 percent in September. Cumulative Italian cheese production grew 2.1 percent.

It does not take a rocket scientist to figure out what's going on here. Milk used for Class IV purposes has fetched a butter and nonfat dry milk price of just $1.18 and $0.80 per pound, respectively. On the other hand, milk used for Class III purposes got a cheese price of $1.60 per pound for blocks and slightly lower for barrels. That has moved milk from butter/powder production into the more lucrative cheese production. Since market prices will respond, this could have the effect of "equalizing" cheese and butter/powder prices.

Cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange continued to fall this week. Block cheese prices fell a nickel per pound this week from $1.48 per pound on Monday to $1.43 per pound by week's end. Barrel cheese prices fell from $1.4550 on Monday to $1.3950 per pound by Friday. Grade AA butter prices strengthened slightly from $1.1850 per pound on Monday to $1.20 per pound by Friday. These price directions made sense, given the Dairy Products report.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Farm Show 2004 Exhibitor Spotlight

Exclusive to Lancaster Farming

Binkley & Hurst Gears Up For Farm Show

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc., Lititz, will again set up a 5,000 square-foot display at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg this coming January.

Don Hoover, Binkley & Hurst sales manager, said the exhibit will feature new equipment, likely including a Keenan mixer as well as new tractor offerings from Case-IH and McCormick.

Binkley & Hurst also plans to demonstrate skid steer loaders and attachments and possibly some tractors in the Large Arena during the show.

According to Hoover, the broad nature of the Farm Show, including its youth livestock events and many family-oriented activities, makes it an appealing venue.

"The Farm Show has a great tradition behind it," he said.

The roots of Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. go back to 1939, when Walter Binkley began selling Huber tractors and livestock feeds in the Lititz area. In 1975, his son David Binkley teamed up with brothers Leonard and Amos Hurst, Jr., to launch Binkley & Hurst Bros.

The company has evolved into a dealer of seven major brands of farm equipment throughout the Mid-Atlantic region today, with 50 employees and a strong focus on service.

"We built the business on service," Hoover said. He noted that the company provides follow-up service on every machine it sells, as well as repair work on other "brand X" equipment.

Included in the company's lineup are Case-IH and McCormick tractors, Kinze planters, Sunflower tillage equipment, Keenan mixers, and Gehl forage and manure-handling equipment.

Pennsylvania Organic Certification Workshop Set

WORTHINGTON (Armstrong Co.) — An upcoming organic certification workshop and tour will focus on organic crops, livestock, and processing standards.

The workshop and tour are set for Nov. 20 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at Creekside Mushroom Ltd., Worthington, Armstrong County.

Farmers seeking organic certification or those who are certified and have questions about the National Organic Standards, will find the program useful.

After workshop sessions from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., Creekside Mushroom Farm will host a tour of its operation.

Producers will learn how to complete an Organic System Plan, what to expect during inspection, and where to apply for cost-share funds. Organic handling practices and materials acceptable for organic production will also be covered.

Organic Standards; Allowed and Prohibited Materials Lists; Organic System Plans, and other forms will be handed out and explained.

There is no charge for the workshop or materials, but registration is required. To register, contact Pennsylvania Certified Organic (PCO) at (814) 364-1344; fax (814) 364-4431; info@paorganic.org; or PCO, 406 S. Penna Ave., Centre Hall, PA 16828.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Banquet Honors Landowners, Supporters

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Most times, the Lancaster Farmland Trust sees a donation amount in a returned pledge card.

This time, it was another story.

The Trust received a pledge card that had dark, almost irate letters that spelled out one possible donor's anger and frustration. "Why bother?" the person wrote. "Everything is built up. One farm saved ain't goin' to make it. Just sell and build, build, build. You lost Lancaster County years ago — give up and build!"

If that's the case — if the program somehow "failed" in the eyes of some — then why did 14 landowners "bother to work with Lancaster Farmland Trust (LFT) this year to ensure that their land will be in agriculture permanently?"

That was the message imparted by Renny Magill, Trust director of development, to 280 registered guests, friends, and supporters Wednesday evening during the LFT's annual dinner at the Quality Inn and Suites.

Magill noted the work of Trust supporters proves that "it isn't too late — and that something tangible and concrete can be done to save enough land to help protect Lancaster County's agriculture infrastructure, to retain our rural heritage, and to save the beauty of Lancaster County that you cherish."

LFT Executive Director Heidi Schellenger noted that in the 15 years of the Trust, 10,604 acres from more than 160 landowners have been preserved, and the landowners made the ultimate commitment, she said. "Their land is never going to be developed."

Schellenger spoke about priority items identified during a strategic study planning process, which includes not only preserved farms, but just as necessary, making the public more aware of the importance of farmland preservation through education and outreach.

"It's not just the awareness of farmers, but of citizens in general to how important agriculture is to the economy and the land base to support agriculture," she said.

The planning process glanced 20 years into the future to see what Lancaster County would look like. The report was unanimous: half the county, or 300,000 acres, can be preserved, a viable goal in 20 years.

A new person will be contracted soon, noted Schellenger, to increase the public's awareness of ag preservation in the county and nationally.

Joseph Del Tito, market president, Wachovia Bank, and Harvest Appeal 2003 chair, noted that the fundraiser reached $100,000 of the $225,000 goal. He announced a new chair for the 2004 Appeal, Kim Smith, chair of the Lancaster Bar and Leadership Lancaster.

Brent Landis, LFT Land Preservation Committee chair, said that from November 2002 to this year, 14 farms were preserved with a value of more than $2.7 million. The cost? About $367,000.

"Half of the preserved farms are members of the Plain Sect," Landis said. They couldn't make the November banquet because "November is wedding month."

R. Ted Bowers, LFT board chair, introduced the annual awards.

Corporate sponsor of the year went to Larry Martin, Good Foods, Inc./Zook Molasses, Honey Brook. Donor of the Year went to Gary Van Dyke, veterinarian from Churchtown.

The Amos H. Funk Spirit of Cooperation Award, business, went to Ted Brubaker, representing Hartman, Underhill and Brubaker, Lancaster. The Amos H. Funk Spirit of Cooperation Award, individual, went to Terry Scheetz, Stevens, and Russ Cox, Lancaster.

Special recognition was given to Rep. Roy Baldwin, Rep. Scot

John Deere 6020 Series Tractors use innovative technologies to help you get the most from your operation. Such as the shift-free John Deere IVT™ (Infinitely Variable Transmission, available on the 6320 and 6420 Tractors). The engine and transmission communicate up to 500 times per second for instant response, automatically seeking the lowest engine rpm for the operating speed you select.

IVT transmissions use advanced PowerTech™ 4V-CR engines (4 valves per cylinder, common rail fuel systems) for deep-breathing torque and greater fuel efficiency at any engine speed. You'll easily pull through tough spots and be able to use wider implements. Dual Temperature Cooling further enhances engine efficiency.

Add TLS (Triple Link Suspension) for MFWD to work at faster field speeds and improve your ride. The independent suspension reduces power hop for more power to the ground.

And HMS (Headland Management System) simplifies repeated sequences (such as headland turns) for less operator fatigue. You'll be able to work longer hours and get crucial operations completed on time.

You'll find new ways to spell productivity with any of the 65- to 90-PTO-hp 6020 Series Tractors. See your John Deere dealer today and ask for a demonstration.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Banquet

Boyd, and Lancaster County commissioners Ron Ford, Pete Shaub, and Paul Thibault.

Volunteer of the Year went to Chris Herr, Millersville.

Distinguished Service Awards were presented to Chris Herr, Millersville; Barb Shaw, Elizabethtown; and Ken Messner, Manheim.

The Pedal to Preserve Fund-raising Event for 2004 will be conducted June 19 beginning at Garden Spot High School, to look at proposed Rt. 23 bypass development.

Robert Herr, Drumore Township, was honored for preserving his farm with Lancaster Farmland Trust.

Following are the 14 farms honored for preservation between Nov. 14, 2002 and Nov, 12, 2003:

• Anonymous, November 2002. This Old Order Amish family in Leacock Township decided preservation was right for their 78-acre dairy operation, but the Trust was only able to preserve 67 acres of this farm because the remaining land is within the Intercourse Urban Growth Boundary (UGB). The farm has 2,100 feet of road frontage along South Queen Road and consists of 100 percent prime agricultural soils.

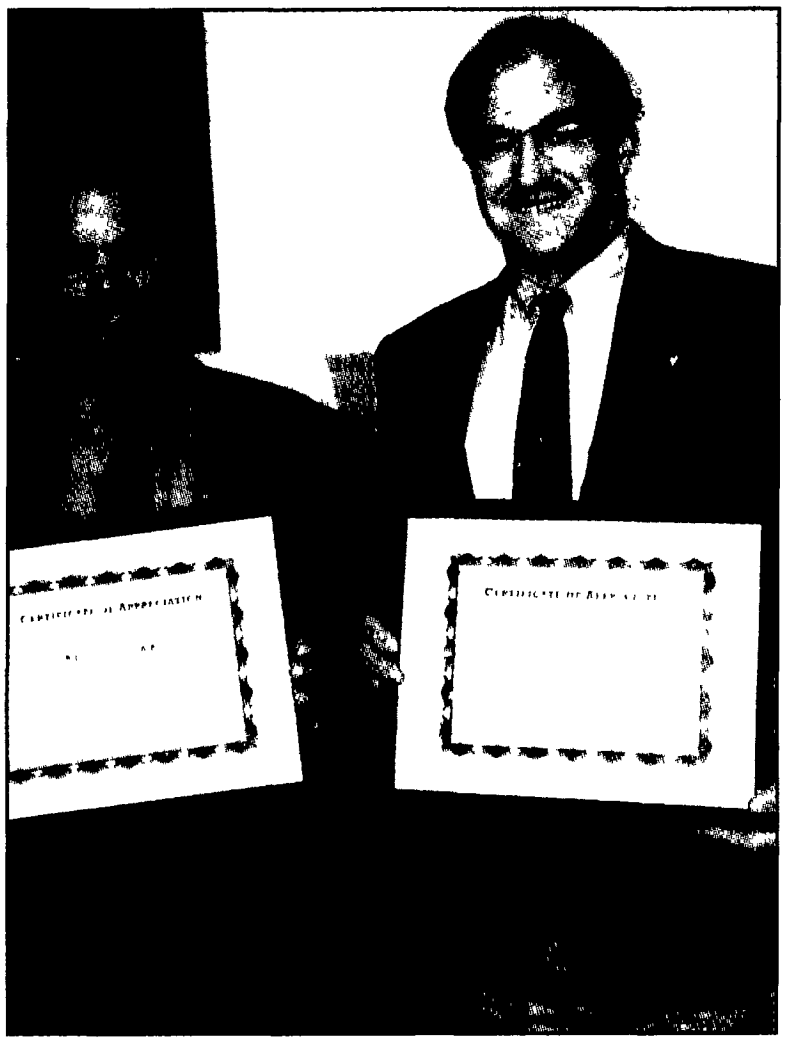
• Anonymous, December 2002. The preservation of this Old Order Amish family's 56-acre farm makes it the second farm to be preserved in West Earl Township. In 2001, the family purchased a farm in Upper Leacock Township that had been preserved by the Trust in the early 1990s. After a potential easement violation on this property, the Amishman decided preservation would be a good option on his home farm. The Trust is working with an adjacent landowner about preserving their farm as well.

• Anonymous, December 2002. The Amish family that owns this 94-acre Sadsbury Township farm heard about preservation through the Octoraro Watershed Association. After doing some research, they decided to preserve the farm before passing it on to their son and daughter-in-law. Their son, who has been farming the property for numerous years, has an organic dairy operation and also raises organic beef, chickens, turkeys, and pigs.

• Anonymous, December 2002. This 76-acre Rapho Township farm is owned by an Old Order Amish family. The owners rent the farm to their daughter and son-in-law, who have a conventional dairy operation with support crops. The farm has 1,500 feet of road frontage on Kilmer Road.

• John Kline and Paul and Mae Kline, December 2002. The Klines were interested in preservation for many years and were originally applicants with the Agricultural Preserve Board. Discovering that their farm did not meet all the requirements to be preserved by the county, they decided to preserve their 74-acre Warwick Township farm with the Trust and the Township by using the Transferable Development rights (TDR) program. The farm is adjacent to the UGB and faces considerable development pressure. The preservation of this farm inspired an adjacent landowner to also preserve through participation in the TDR program.

• Anonymous, December 2002. This was the second farm the Trust preserved in Leacock Township in 2002 (after last year's annual dinner). The Old Order Amish family that owns the property are retired from farming but rent to an adjacent farmer. This 71-acre farm is highly visible from Route 340 and contains more than 3,000 feet of road frontage. The farm also contains 100 percent of prime agricultural soils.



Special recognition for support of the Lancaster Farmland Trust went to Rep. Scott Boyd, left, and Rep. Roy Baldwin. All photos by Andy Andrews, editor

• Anonymous, 2002. This Old Order Amish Leacock Township dairy farm has 1,000 feet of frontage along the Pequea Creek and is within one mile of the Intercourse UGB and half a mile of the Paradise UGB. The farm contains 100 percent prime agricultural soils and has more than 2,200 feet of road frontage. The farm family also hosted the Trust's annual picnic this year.

• Anonymous, March 2003. The Old Order

Nutrient Management Planning

minimize the impact to farm production.

According to a publication issued by Penn State, the P- Index is a field evaluation tool that was developed to identify areas that have high vulnerably or risk to phosphorus loss to surface water bodies.

The P-Index is formulated from the phosphorus sources of a field, such as soil test, fertilizer application, and manure application; and transport factors, such as distance to a body of water and any modifications done to a field to reduce or increase the transport of phosphorus.

In Lancaster County, several farms have already begun the conversion from an N-based plan to a P-based plan.

According to Kevin Seibert, nutrient management technician for the Lancaster County Conservation District, his staff has reviewed between 10-12 plans for the P-Index. The main driving factor of a P-based plan at this point is to meet the USDA Natural Recourses Conservation Service's (USDA-NRCS) requirement for a P-based plan for the nutrient management standard called 590.

This standard is used for farm projects that will utilize USDA-NRCS cost-sharing programs such as Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and for technical assistance for manure storages and projects that change the manure handling on a farm.

One farm that has taken the step to adjust to a P-based plan is Streambank fencing and crossings are two of the best management practices used by the Brubakers to control phosphorus.

Brubaker Farms operates a dairy and poultry operation that falls under CAFO regulations. Brubakers work to manage their manure from the farm through effective record keeping and nutrient management planning.

Brubaker Farms of Mount Joy. Operated by Luke Brubaker along with his sons, Mike and Tony, they have more than 600 dairy cows, 450 calves and heifers, and 48,000 broiler chickens. This 1,000-acre dairy and poultry operation also is classified as a concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO.)

A CAFO is defined as a farm with greater than 300 animal units and is permitted for operation under the Federal CAFO program, administered by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Under current regulations, the Brubaker Farm is a volunteer farm for the Nutrient Management Act (Act 6).

> "When the milk price is low, it's going to impact dairy farmers very much. Because if they do not get any help from NRCS to build a pit or to do conservation practices, they are going to say, 'I can't do it.'"
> Luke Brubaker

According to Luke Brubaker, the decision to switch from their N-based plan to a P-based plan was simple. It was to keep pace with future plans of the operation. However, as they have switched over, Brubaker notes there has been some management changes.

"It will take more recordkeeping," said Brubaker, "But we had what we feel were good records beforehand. So, in our case it was not as difficult."

Brubaker also accounts their management changes because of the P-based plan were minimized becasue of the farm's long- term

Estimated lean value is projected to use slaughter weights with normal confinement feeding conditions Vaccination and health program values are not included but health status should be disclosed commitment to the implementation of best management practices (BMPs) on the farm through their original N-based plan and their conservation plan.

Nutrient Management Planning

To date, Brubaker farms has an estimated 17 BMPs to help manage their nutrients, from addressing rainwater in the barnyards, to provide better field management, and to improve manure handling.

However, Brubaker said a farm that is just beginning a conservation program "might have to do a lot more work if starting from square one."

Seibert also notes that the P-based plan will change the focus on BMPs from the obvious problems that are addressed in a N-based plan to include the more subtle problems causing soil erosion.

In the mechanics of writing a nutrient management plan, a plan writer will evaluate a field using the P-Index to appraise the phosphorus pollution risk.

Based on thresholds, if the index rating is low to medium, a farmer can continue to apply manure to meet the nitrogen requirement of a field.

If a high index is calculated, a farmer is limited to spreading manure to only meet the phosphorus requirement of a field.

If it is very high, a farmer will be restricted from the application of any manure on a field.

In high and very high indexing fields, farms will have to meet nitrogen requirements with commercial nitrogen fertilizers instead of manure.

As Pennsylvania moves to P-based plans, Seibert expressed concerns on the P-Index in pastures.

"Smaller farms who pasture their livestock may become a problem. There are some pastures that I have seen on plans already where you cannot apply any more phosphorus as the plan reads. Therefore they have to abandon their pastures," said Seibert.

Seibert stresses that for farms that are forced to abandon pastures until the phosphorus is reduced could seek alternatives, such as new pasturelands or moving to total confinement. These changes could impact the management of livestock, manure storage, and facilities.

Seibert said that pastures might be an area that may need to be revisited with the Act 6 to ease the potential economic stress, balancing it with environmental needs without totally abandoning pasturelands.

The Brubaker farm only utilizes pastures for their heifers, with their milking cows held in confinement. Although the pasture management has been able to remain the same, their handling of crop fields near waterways has not.

> "Smaller farms who pasture their livestock may become a problem. There are some pastures that I have seen on plans already where you cannot apply any more phosphorus as the plan reads. Therefore they have to abandon their pastures."
> Kevin Seibert

"We have to be more aware of our soil tests closer to the stream," said Brubaker. "We might have to manage the 150 feet to the stream differently, then back from that stream, with more record keeping and understanding of the P-based plan — how it works — and to know how to apply manure."

Brubaker also holds firmly to the belief that farmers want to be good stewards and adapt to the new standards.

"Farmers will want to try and do their best to meet the plan," said Brubaker, "But it might be difficult in some situations."

For Brubaker, he is a firm believer in building his farm for the future, noting the need to be sensitive to community needs, keep the farm economically sound and environmentally friendly.

But, it is economics that have slowed the Brubaker farm to the implementation of several new best management practices on his farm such as a methane digester, a manure solids separator, and a manure storage facility. Brubaker has filed for grants to help reduce the costs for these new practices; however, moving to a final stage is economically driven.

"When the milk price is low, it's going to impact dairy farmers very much. Because if they do not get any help from NRCS to build a pit or to do conservation practices, they are going to say, 'I can't do it.'"

Under the P-based plan, Brubaker continually stresses management. If the farm was unable to use all of their manure and would have to move to exporting, it could cause a monetary loss to the farm and "put them at the mercy of other landowners" to take the manure.

"In our case, if we could not manage the plan properly to use our liquid manure, that would be devastating to our operation," said Brubaker. "We might not have anywhere to go with it."

Another cost to the farm besides manure exporting would be the use of commercial fertilizers to meet crop needs instead of using manure to meet nitrogen needs in fields where there was a phosphorus application limit.

Goodlander said that the commission is working on identifying areas that could be most prone to high phosphorus index and help to identify alternative methods for addressing high P-Index concerns.

"The commission does feel they have a role to play to help for farmers through the process. Because as we revise our regulations to require this second look at phosphorus, we also need to help farmers to address that," said Goodlander.

The cost of P-based planning is not just limited to the costs for the implementation of a plan, but also the time and effort that will have to be taken to write and review a P-based nutrient management plan.

To help farmers defray the costs of revising a nutrient management plan to include the P-Index, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's (PDA) Plan Development Incentives Program (PDIP) is adding a section to allow for cost sharing the cost of one plan revision and soil testing.

For Seibert, the P-based plans in Lancaster County accounted for only one percent of reviews completed so far this year; however, the time needed to properly review the plans were 2-3 times longer in comparison to an N-based plan. In conservation districts with a high number of nutrient management plans, this will create an added workload.

> "Farmers will want to try and do their best to meet the plan. But it might be difficult in some situations."
> Luke Brubaker

To do an effective job at the review process, Seibert stresses the district will have to consider adding onto his staff to do everything correctly or something may be missed.

As the commission moves forward on preparing their revisions for public comment, the P Index and other changes will be up for evaluation by the farming community and public.

"It new world of nutrient management, it's more detailed," said Goodlander in regards to the use of the P-Index and Act 6 changes. "Look at the world of agriculture and the world of people looking at agriculture. As the world moves on, agriculture is going to be more challenged to document that they are doing things well. The nutrient management act provides them the opportunity to document that they are doing things well."

Precision agriculture in crop production means adhering to strict standards when applying crop inputs. Farmers should always manage crops with a close eye on soil fertility and soil test recommendations for optimum yield.

With the many crops grown in our Pennsylvania rotations, it's important that farmers use sound management when applying fertilizer nutrients. This article will point out a few tips to keep in mind while managing specific crops for optimum yields. These recommendations are taken from the latest Penn State Agronomy Guide available online and from your county Cooperative Extension office.

Soil testing is the best method of determining soil fertility status and is the basis for developing a sound soil fertility program. Soil kits can be purchased from county Penn State Cooperative Extension offices and also from your full service fertilizer dealer. Carefully follow instructions for collecting and handling the sample. The soil test report you receive from the testing lab will include specific recommendations for adding fertilizer to optimize crop yields. Pay close attention to the recommendations and don't over apply.

Often the most accurate and economical way to apply plant nutrients is commercial fertilizers. This is because commercial fertilizers can be blended or used as components to provide the precise rate of nutrient required to optimize crop yields without over applying nutrients. They are also easy to handle and can be applied in-season as topdress or sidedress applications.

Soybeans that are properly inoculated with nitrogen-fixing bacteria rarely respond to nitrogen fertilization. If the previous year's crop was not soybeans, inoculate with fresh, viable nitrogen-fixing bacteria immediately before planting. Recent research results indicate a 70 percent chance for a two bushel per acre increase when inoculating seed planted into fields growing soybeans every other year. With that said, it is important that P and K be available in sufficient amounts to optimize soybean yields. In a rotation, soybeans can make use of fertilizer applied to the previous crop. When double cropping, add the P and K to the barley. Maintain soil pH between 6.0 and 6.5. If pH is below 6.0 and is not to be corrected with lime, apply molybdenum as a seed treatment at planting. This helps to ensure proper N fixation.

Corn responds well to properly timed applications of fertilizer. The term "starter fertilizer" refers to a practice, not a material. Starter fertilizer is placed strategically near seed so that it is readily available. This practice improves early seedling growth during cool growing conditions and can help produce earlier-maturing and higher-yielding crops. A good starter contains a high percentage of P; for example, N-P-K ratios of 1-2-1, 1-3-1, 1-4-2, or 1-5-0 are common.

MAP is preferred over DAP as a starter fertilizer ingredient. Both liquid and dry fertilizer materials perform well. Corn P requirements can be met by banding phosphate fertilizers in the starter. Do not allow the N plus K in the starter to exceed 60 to 70 total pounds per acre. Your Certified Crop Advisor or local fertilizer dealer can help you make the right recommendation for your soil nutrient status based on your soil test results.

Corn is a heavy N feeder. For a 125-bushel per acre yield goal, 130 pounds of N is recommended. A 21-ton per acre silage yield requires 150 pounds of N. For corn following a legume in a rotation, reduce the N recommendation according to the Agronomy Guide to credit residual N. For more efficient N utilization, apply 50-90 percent of the N when corn is 10-20 inches tall. This can be done by side-dressing with commercial fertilizer.

Cool season grasses also require a lot of N. A four-ton per acre yield of orchardgrass, bromegrass, timothy, or reed canarygrass requires 160 pounds of N. It's important that this N is applied in split applications, as the grass needs it. Three applications before each cutting: spring, early summer (with P and K) and early fall. Commercial N is particularly well suited to spoon-feeding grass hay crops because it is easy to calibrate and does not put on excessive P or K that could be of concern to livestock producers and the environment. Base the amount applied at each application time on the expected yield for the next cutting.

Alfalfa production also requires spoon-feeding throughout the growing season. As a heavy feeder of K, it's important that farmers carefully and fully fertilize for that nutrient. Alfalfa yields of five tons per acre require 250 pounds of fertilizer K. High levels of P and K must be maintained in the soil for high crop yields. High alfalfa yields can deplete plant nutrients in the soil rapidly. For top production, annual soil testing is recommended. When the soil test indicates the need for fertilizer, topdress after first and/or last cutting. Split applications, half in the fall and half after first cutting, may result in more efficient use of fertilizer, especially K. Recent research suggests that, based on nutrient removal, a 0-1-4 ratio of N-P-K is best when high yields are anticipated.

Fine-tuning your soil fertility program requires timely and precise applications of commercial fertilizer and manure, if available. It's important to sharpen your pencil and do your management homework with a recent soil test, the Agronomy Guide and a competent crop advisor to obtain optimum yields.

In this article, P is used to refer to fertilizer P2O5 and K is used to refer to fertilizer K2O.

WHAT EVERY DAIRY PRODUCER SHOULD KNOW BEFORE TREATING A SICK COW

Galen Kopp
Extension Agent
Dairy/Livestock

Dairy producers are responsible for the safe use of animal health products. This includes withdrawing milk during and after treatment according to label instructions. Meat withdrawal is equally important, and is separately labeled and typically much longer than for milk.

Some medicinal compounds take many months to clear the body's filtering system, comprised of organs such as the kidneys which are targeted for testing by USDA inspectors.

Antibiotic meat residues were the second most frequent problem cited by packers in the 1999 National Market Cow and Bull Quality Audit. As the media spotlight centers on animal health and food safety issues, government regulators are stepping up their surveillance for these residues in cow and bull beef. Packers are spending more money to address these issues, and they are beginning to require producers to certify that they have followed FDA regulations and are marketing animals which will contain no illegal drug residues in the meat or filtering organs.

Violators risk increased penalties and reduced access to markets. And the entire dairy and livestock industry is at risk for increased regulation of the animal health products producers depend upon.

Penn State University meat scientist Dr. William Henning noted that for dairy beef processors, antibiotic residue avoidance is top priority because they have a quality and safety commitment to consumers. Dairy producers share that commitment every time they cull an animal. In general, producers are doing a good job with meat residues avoidance; however, everyone pays for the proverbial "five percenters."

According to USDA's Residue Monitoring Program, the overall incidence of antibiotic meat residue violations is very small and declining. However, dairy cows and dairy bob calves still have the highest rate of violative residue among all classes of cattle.

Ultimately, the final food product of every dairy animal is beef. So, the time to consider the meat withdrawal period is before treating. Producers and their veterinarians have an obligation to consider the cow's final destination when making choices about her treatment.

The best way to avoid marketing animals that are severely disabled, or animals with treatment residues in the body, is to evaluate health conditions early, before they get out of hand. Waiting to treat for overt signs of illness is costly, and jeopardizes the health of the herd as a unit. Plus, the producer runs a greater risk of losing the cows, or losing the option of marketing the animal for its beef value.

Researchers estimate that each year, 30 percent of dairy cows come to the packing plant with clinically apparent inflammation of the mammary gland, which presents challenges at the plant. Also, 7 percent of cows are lame or disabled. On average, 39 pounds of carcass product is lost because of removal of arthritic joints and nearby tissue. These inflammatory conditions are typically treated with animal health products on the farm, before the animal is finally culled.

This is why more attention must be paid to early disease evaluation, culling, and treatment. When a producer makes the decision to treat, rather than cull persistent or declining health conditions, he believes the cow will recover to sound health. If the animal's health continues to decline while the prescribed meat withdrawal period is still in effect, euthanasia is the only option available.

Antibiotic use, observance of meat withdrawal, and the condition in which cows are culled are human health issues that are managed at the farm level.

Lancaster Farmland Trust Banquet

Amish family that owns this farm was the fourth family in Leacock Township to preserve in the past year. The farm is adjacent to the previous farm, creating the important "building block" effect of preserved farmland. The farm has 1,600 feet of frontage along the Pequea Creek and contains 96 percent prime agricultural soils. A dairy and small hog operation exists on the farm.

• Karen M. Wenger, Ronald D. Wenger, and estate of C. Bruce Wenger, March 2003. Staff had been working with the Wenger family for more than two years before their 80-acre Elizabeth Township farm was preserved in March of 2003. The farm was sold at auction to an adjacent Amish farmer who plans on running a small dairy operation. Its 3,700 feet of road frontage makes for a wonderful view as you drive along Brubaker Valley Road. It contains 100 percent prime agricultural soils and is so flat that you can see the entire farm while standing anywhere on the property.

• Anonymous, 2003. This farm, the fifth to be preserved in Leacock Township, is owned by an Old Order Amish family. It is adjacent to another preserved farm and is only one property away from two more preserved farms. The farm is within a half mile of the Intercourse UGB. It has more than 2,800 feet of road frontage and contains 100 percent prime agricultural soils. This farmer has been very direct in stating he wants to see more farms preserved in Leacock Township and has offered to help whenever he can.

• Anonymous, August 2003. This beautiful Strasburg Township farm was preserved just this past summer. The owner of the farm was undecided if he wanted to preserve with the Trust or with the Ag Preserve Board. After hearing his farm would probably not be preserved for at least three years with the Ag Preserve Board, he decided to preserve with the Trust. This farm has more than 3,000 feet of frontage along the Beaver Creek, which was fenced off from the cattle in 2001. The farmer worked with the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and Ducks Unlimited to accomplish this goal.

• Robert R. Herr, August 2003. These two farms are located in Drumore Township and are owned by Robert Herr. Herr worked with the Trust a few years ago to preserve a different farm in Drumore Township. The 60- and 25-acre pieces were important to preserve because of their proximity to other preserved farms, as well as their proximity to the Lancaster County Conservancy's Fishing Creek Preserve. There is a chance that one of the neighboring farms may also be preserved in the near future.

• Herma R. Losensky, September 2003. This 18-acre farm was preserved in conjunction with Warwick Township using their Transferable Development Rights (TDR) Program. The farm is adjacent to the Kline farm that was preserved in December of 2002 and is also adjacent to the UGB. Trust staff and Warwick Township have focused on the surrounding farms as ones to target for the next TDR transfer.

awareness course taught by a science teacher. The class was not vocational agriculture or affiliated with FFA," Robinson said.

But the introduction to agriculture so fascinated Robinson that he chose to study ag education at Penn State. After earning his degree, Robinson married Evelyn Gustavsen from Lancaster County and taught vocational agriculture in Pottstown for four years.

> "The opportunity to serve Lancaster County as the conservation district administrator and as an ag teacher has been a richly rewarding experience. I feel blessed to have worked with so many fine people who share the values and appreciation for our county, its natural resources, and its people."
> Don Robinson

Robinson's next three years as an Army officer may appear to be unrelated to his career, but even that prepared him for his eventual managerial position, he said.

As an administrative officer, Robinson helped organize a MASH unit for a civilian hospital in Vietnam.

Just like the popular MASH television series, Robinson experienced living with three doctors and helping operate, sometimes by sheer candlelight, while the hospital was under enemy fire.

By the time Robinson had gone to Vietnam, he and his wife had three children. Robinson moved his family to Lancaster County so that relatives could provide moral support to his wife and children during his stint in Vietnam.

After three years in the Army, Robinson was hired as a vocational agriculture teacher at Garden Spot High School.

In the first years, Robinson taught two high school classes and spent the remainder of the day with adult farmers. His duties in working with individual farmers increased, and by the fourth year of his employment, Robinson was appointed to work full time with farmers through the adult farmer program.

In this position, Robinson said his duties were similar to an extension agent, except he worked only within the school district. The plan was to include Plain Sect farmers, who paid taxes but were not utilizing any educational opportunities. Because Robinson worked with the school district and not a government office, the plain sect farmers were more inclined to learn about conservation practices and crop management and receive pesticide training.

In succeeding years, the face of agriculture begin to change requiring Robinson to learn new technology and teach such things as trickle irrigation, greenhouse management, and vegetable and bedding production.

"In the beginning, we were cow and corn people who didn't known anything about produce," Robinson said of he and his colleague Bob Anderson. "We learned with them (produce farmers)."

One of the best learning methods was the trial vegetable plot, established at the Leola Produce Auction site, used for demonstration purposes.

"We'd experiment with different methods, such as using mulch, raised beds, and row covers," Robinson said. Farmers could visit the demonstration garden throughout the growing season.

"We'd follow the results, and at the end of the growing season, conduct meetings to share the results of the research."

The meetings were well attended, even drawing many farmers from surrounding states.

Robinson was instrumental in helping develop the Leola Produce Auction, which has more than $6 million annually in sales. Since then, the Leola Auction has been used as model for the development of two additional county auctions and at least six others in neighboring counties and states.

Robinson worked one-on-one with farmers by day, and conducted educational meetings many evenings, drawing on experts in the fields.

He helped farmers lay out contour strips and waterways and worked closely with the LCCD. At age 55, Robinson took early retirement from the school district to become administrator of LCCD. For the seven prior years, he had served on the board of directors for LCCD, and his close relationship with many farmers and business persons helped in his responsibilities at LCCD.

"The biggest change was leaving the field to manage people and programs," Robinson said.

Under his directorship, LCCD grew from 13 employees to 23 to meet the demand for nutrient management programs, engineering, and environmental regulations.

"One of the biggest and unexpected changes was the political ramifications involved in this position," Robinson said.

Although the political chal-

Seminar Discusses Poultry Composting To Control Catastrophic Disease

CHARLENE M. SHUPP ESPENSHADE
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) Poultry industry representatives gathered at Kreider's Restaurant in Manheim Monday to hear Dr. Lewis Carr, University of Maryland, discuss a composting trial to prepare the Delmarva region for disease outbreaks.

Avian Influenza (A.I.) and other diseases were the driving force behind organizing the demonstration to find an economically efficient way to handle the birds in a bio-secure manner.

The solution Dr. Carr demonstrated for the Maryland poultry industry was composing the birds in the poultry house instead of incineration or burial.

As stated in his paper on "Guidelines for In-House Composting of Catastrophic Poultry Mortality," Carr writes, "Composting of mortalities on the farm appears to be the most acceptable because it averts potential groundwater pollution from burial, avoids high fuel cost and potential air pollution with incineration, and prevents the potential disease spread associated with transportation to landfills and the associated transport costs and tipping fees. Properly done, in-house composting of poultry carcasses is a cost-effective and biosecure means of inactivating pathogenic organisms in both the carcass and litter."

During his talk, Carr said another benefit to composting was that "we are treating the litter and the house at the same time we are composting the birds. As far as we are concerned, we are doing two things at one shot," instead of treating the litter and birds separately as would be the case in alternative methods.

Carr also said, "Composting of the contaminated litter and carcasses destroys pathogens in poultry houses, thus reducing the potential for disease spread."

The composting process as Carr stressed is a "cooking process" and when the proper "environment is provided, "the organisms will have a banquet."

In regards to A.I., research shows that the virus can be inactivated at 140 degrees in 10 minutes or 133 degrees in 15-20 minutes. Composting will achieve these temperatures, with an average compost temperature between 135-145 degrees.

Carr also said, "Another reason to compost — We know what these birds do when we compost. Under the ground, we do not."

In the composting demonstration, Carr's team organized three different ways to compost the birds, layering the birds and the litter, shredding the birds and piling the birds and litter, and mixing and piling the birds.

The resulting personnel and time needed to set up the entire compost windrow ranged between 2-4 people and between 4-7 hours, dependent on the method chosen. Dr. Carr said this proved that this option was not as labor intensive as believed.

After the composting process is completed, Carr said the demonstration compost was land applied and incorporated. The time used to compost this pile was about three months. If the compost pile is moved out of the house when it is ready to be turned for the first time, the amount of time a house is tied up is about three weeks.

At the conclusion of his speech, Carr encouraged the audience that the results he gave were accurate for the Delmarva area and should consider organizing a demonstration in a non-emergency situation to see how it works under Pennsylvania conditions.

Carr also stressed that the demonstration has helped Maryland because they have knowledge of how this process works in their state and demonstrated its worth as a viable option to their veterinarians.

"We have firsthand knowledge now on what had to be done. That was the reason for the demonstration. The issue that we had to demonstrate to our industry is that this was viable, economical, and I think we have most all the company vets on our side now. It used to not be that way."

lenges are not along party lines, Robinson's expertise demands that he become a public spokesperson for agriculture with construction and farm preservation groups and with the Chamber of Commerce and county commissioners.

"There is an increasing focus on environment and farmer responsibility," he said. "The concerns related to farming have magnified, and regulations are getting harder and harder."

He is concerned that small farmers — who do not have the finances to meet government regulations — may be phased out.

"Although I believe that conservation practices pay for themselves over a period of time, the costs cannot be recouped immediately."

He is concerned that farmers using bigger and bigger equipment find it inconvenient to use contour farming methods. And he is concerned that many male Amish are finding off-farm employment. How these issues affect the future of the county's agriculture remains to be seen.

"I'm afraid America's desire for cheap food and lack of respect for farmers will result in United States being held hostage for food," Robinson said of his concern that the country is growing increasingly dependent on other countries for food sources.

While his career was bustling, Robinson and his wife also watched their family expand. The couple had six biological children before participating in the county's foster care program. After caring for several foster children, the Robinsons adopted two of them.

"My wife was an only child, and from the beginning she wanted a large family," Robinson said.

The children are grown and the Robinsons have 14 — soon to be 15 — grandchildren.

"That's one of the reasons I want to retire," Robinson said, "so that I can spend more time with the grandchildren."

He also envisions helping with church mission work projects in other countries, such as a recent Jamaican trip.

"I hope to use my skills and knowledge," Robinson said of the possibility of providing input to the conservation district and other boards.

"If I have helped develop a conservation ethic and a love for agriculture, I feel like I have accomplished something, and have done what the Lord has put me here for," Robinson said.

"The opportunity to serve Lancaster County as the conservation district administrator and as an ag teacher has been a richly rewarding experience. I feel blessed to have worked with so many fine people who share the values and appreciation for our county, its natural resources, and its people," Robinson said.

Robinson was instrumental in helping develop the Leola Produce Auction, which has more than $6 million annually in sales. Since then, the Leola Auction has been used as model for the development of two additional county auctions and at least six others in neighboring counties and states.

The numerous awards presented to Robinson acknowledge his sphere of influence. Some of those are the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives Master Educator Award, U.S.D.A. Administrator's Award, Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Hal Doran Service Award, and George Delp Ag Industry Award.

Robinson also serves on the state Nutrient Management advisory board and on the Lower Susquehanna Regional Water Basin Preservation Committee.

Don McNutt, Womelsdorf, has been selected to replace Robinson. McNutt has been employed as a LCCD erosion and sediment technician for three years. Before that McNutt, who grew up on a dairy farm in Indiana County, served as ag instructor at Lower Dauphin, Cornwall-Lebanon, and Conrad Weiser school districts.

clear: if you put manure on land to simply meet the nitrogen demand of the crops, then you will be overapplying phosphorus, which contributes to bay pollution and may even, at high enough levels, be actually toxic to your crops.

In the old days, a farmer grew just enough crops on the land to meet the feed demands of his animals. Now, the farmer has a lot of animals on a small amount of land, and the imported feed is contributing to the concerns the federal government has about water pollution.

In the old days, according to the USDA representative, experts thought phosphorus was completely bound to the soil. That you could only have phosphorus problems if you had erosion. That's not true anymore. Kleinman and his colleagues have accumulated evidence that phosphorus moves with rainwater.

A lot of phosphorus moved this year, the state's rainiest year on record.

Time will tell what kind of grief and heartache these new regulations will cause. We will inform you as to specific dates and times and plans. Read on — the story of a new Nutrient Management Law gets more interesting by the moment, and how it affects us all will be sometimes annoying, always interesting.

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — Four Holsteins have graduated into the active-A.I. lineup at Select Sires following the Nov. 10 announcement of new official dairy-sire evaluations USDA, Interbull, and Holstein Association USA. Three of these new sires are debuting on the breed's Top-100 TPI(TM) list, with all four transmitting a balance of production and type.

State Extension Agents Receive National Awards

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Four Pennsylvania cooperative extension agents have been honored by the National Association of County Agricultural Agents (NACAA).

Receiving the Achievement Award (AA) were Linda Spahr, York County extension agent for 4-H dairy and livestock, and Dwane Miller, Schuylkill County extension agent for agriculture.

Receiving the Distinguished Service Award (DSA) were Dan McFarland, senior extension agent and agricultural engineer in the capital region, and Norman Conrad, senior extension agent in Union County.

The four extension agents were honored at the NACAA Annual Meeting and Professional Improvement Conference which took place recently in Green Bay.

The Achievement Award (AA) is presented to the top one percent of agents in each state who have less than ten years of service in Extension. The selection is made by the agents' peers in each state. This year 53 agents won the award at the national level.

Spahr conducts educational programs for 4-H dairy and livestock members in her county and region. She also is responsible for agricultural literacy programming in schools. She conducts a summer day camp that has been chosen by parents as a top educational program for children.

Linda Spahr

Dwane Miller

Dan McFarland

Norman Conrad

Miller is responsible for agronomy, livestock, dairy, and 4-H livestock programming in Schuylkill County. His programs in water quality and conservation have taught people about groundwater flow, helped people understand safe drinking water and how to interpret their test results, and taught private septic system owners about maintenance and system failurs. He also taught non-point source pollution principals to school youth.

In addition to their national recognition, the AA winners will receive a Nittany Lion statue and an award from the PA Rural Electric Association.

The DSA is presented to the top two percent of agents in each state who have more than ten years of service in Extension.The selection is made by the agents' peers in each state. This year 81 agents won the award at the national level.

McFarland serves as an ag engineer for six counties in the Capital Region, and he is based in York County. His major program focus has included improving productivity and profitability in new and existing dairy and livestock shelters. His efforts include designs to improve resting area comfort, ventilation, feed and water areas, and heat stress abatement. Over 85% of producers visited in the last five years have adopted facility improvements suggested by him. His educational programs have reached over 9,000 people with nearly 100 presentations in nine states and Canada. He also has been published in national dairy magazines.

Conrad is responsible for conducting educational programs in agronomic production, water quality, Integrated Pest Management, and farm safety. He coordinated one of the nation's first mandatory manure law implementations, developing educational materials and teaching agency staff and farmers who developed over 800 plans in two years.

Conrad has also worked with local groups to lower county property taxes an average of $85 per farm based on the "non-contributory" value of old barns. He also worked with a group of high school students to produce a video titled "Better Barnyard Management", which won two national awards and was viewed by 4,000 people the year of its release.

In addition to the national awards, the DSA winners will receive a Nittany Lion statue or other Penn State item, an award from the PA Rural Electric Association, and a House Of Representatives Citation.

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) – In the spirit of "one for all, and all for one," 4-H members received scholarships and donated back to the Wayne County Junior Livestock Scholarship Fund at the Wayne County Fairgrounds, Saturday, Aug. 9.

Students who qualified for scholarships included: Richard Donovan, Jocelyn Grossman, Nick Keating, Emily Lantzsch, Andrew Lopatofsky, Ashley Liptak, Thomas Nebzydoski, Jeremy O'Neill, Michael Palmer, Jennie Reed, Christopher Rickard, Charity Rybak, Megan Schweighofer, Thomas Warnock, and Matthew Weist.

To date, 43 Wayne County Junior Livestock Scholarships have been awarded since 1998. The scholarships were presented by Dr. Henry Nebzydoski who referred to the recipients as "America's most important resource."

At the start of the livestock sale, which grossed a record $212,422, Grand Champion Market Hog exhibitor Grace Nebzydoski announced that she was donating the entire proceeds from the sale of her 246 pound crossbred market hog to the Wayne County Junior Livestock Scholarship Fund, renamed this year for her cousin Dr. David Nebzydoski, who was a former 4-H livestock program participant and, later, a supporter of the program.

Grand champion market hog at the Wayne Co. Show, exhibited by Grace Nebzydoski, was purchased by Roger Dirlam of Dirlam Brothers Lumber Company.

The sale then took off at a brisk pace with Roger Dirlam, representing Dirlam Brothers Lumber Company of Honesdale, successfully bidding the Grand Champion hog to another record amount of $16.25 per pound.

In addition to Grace, who is the 11-year-old daughter of Dr. Andrew Nebzydoski and Dr. Patricia Morgan, and a member of the Pleasant Mount Go-Getters 4-H Club, other 4-H members gave the entire amount bid for one of their animals directly to the Livestock Scholarship Fund.

Amanda Eroh and Matthew Hauenstein, both of Creamton Area 4-H Club, also sold hogs for the Scholarship. Amanda is the daughter of Deborah and Don Eroh. Matthew is the son of Beth and Leonard Hauenstein.

The 250 pound Reserve Grand Champion Hampshire crossbred market hog, raised by Ryan Diehl of Tri-Gal 4-H was sold to the Wayne Bank for $5.50 per pound. Ryan is the son of Louis and Jule Diehl.

Jessica Miller, daughter of Jim and Rosemary Miller and a member of the Pleasant Mount Go-Getters, raised the 124 pound Grand Champion Market Lamb. Dr. Henry Nebzydoski, Wayne County veterinarian, successfully bid this Suffolk crossbred animal to $11.50 per pound.

The Reserve Grand Champion 118 pound Suffolk crossbred Market Lamb was raised by Michael Sheruda, son of Beverly and Michael Sheruda and a member of the Pleasant Mount Go-Getters 4-H Club. John Marshall of Marshall Machinery bought this animal for $7 per pound.

Rebecca Scull's 1,265 Grand Champion Angus crossbred Market Steer was purchased by Elwin and Shirley Ostrander for $3.35 per pound. Rebecca is the daughter of Ronald and Tammy Scull and a member of the Laurella 4-H Club.

Pleasant Mount Go-Getter Emily Lantzsch raised the 1,225 pound Reserve Grand Champion Steer. This Angus crossbred steer was successfully bid to $2.05 per pound by David Gelatt of Precision Homes.

Support for 4-H livestock program participants remained strong throughout the sale. 218 hogs, 132 lambs and 38 steers were sold by volunteer auctioneers Wayne Weaver, Dick Sands, Barry Sands, Bob Earl, Tom Randt, Dan Naylor, John Regan, Archie Dutton, and Matt Manasse.

Volume buyers in dollar amount poured into the sale included Dirlam Brothers Lumber, Waymart Milling, Rusty Palmer, Inc., Darling Meats, and Elwin and Shirley Ostrander. Volume buyers in terms of number of animals purchased were Rusty Palmer, Marshall Machinery, Mike's Heavy Equipment and Trailer Sales, Inc., and Top Notch Distributors. Kent Brown of Highlights for Children successfully bid 48 animals himself, which were purchased in the names of local businesses.

Additionally, many buyers returned 61 animals for resale to benefit the Dr. David J. Nebzydoski Memorial Junior Livestock Sale Scholarship, the Diane Curtis Medical Fund, the Wayne County Agricultural Society, Laurella 4-H Club, and the Dawn Daniels Kidney Fund.

people from the control of a tyrant so cruel that he ordered chemical warfare against a segment of his own population!

And before Iraq, we fought battles in the barren mountains of Afghanistan and also won that war, ousting a band of terrorists who orchestrated the most horrid act of terror ever perpetrated against innocent civilians.

But we know the war on terrorism — this new kind of hideous warfare that deviously and violently takes the lives of the innocent as they go about their daily tasks — is alive and thriving throughout the world.

Acts of terror continue to take the lives of and injure our military as they try to bring peace, freedom, stability, and order to two countries that have been in turmoil and chaos for decades.

Pennsylvania's service men and women have been and continue to be prominent among the volunteer army serving in Iraq, Afghanistan, Kosovo and other hot spots around the world.

They have left behind their spouses and children, parents, friends, and other relatives and their civilian jobs to answer the call to serve and protect our country.

As they return home now and in the months ahead we must embrace them, bring them into the fold of veterans of World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Persian Gulf, and the Cold War. We must let them know how much we appreciate and respect them for their service.

Just as with all our veterans, past and present, we must never forget them or take them for granted.

I firmly believe that America will endure as long as we continue to have valiant men and women in the armed services who are willing to fight for the ideals that we hold sacred.

Whenever our freedom is endangered, our service men and women — these heroes — rise to the challenge. This nation remains a free nation only because our veterans fought and continue to fight to keep it that way. Remember, freedom is not free.

So I urge residents throughout the area not to forget that we are eternally indebted to America's veterans — those of yesterday's battles and those returning home today and in the days to come.

As President Calvin Coolidge once said: "A nation which forgets its defenders will itself be forgotten."

— Rep. Paul Semmel (R-187)

The Chester County Extension Board also recognized Pat Taws for her time and dedication to the county extension program. In her remarks, Cheryl Fairbairn, county extension director, noted several highlights.

"I can't say enough about her — we really appreciate the work she does." Fairbairn also expressed in the office Taws is the "Internet expert" and more importantly, "she knows where everything is." For the keynote speaker, Cheryl Cook, deputy secretary of marketing and economic development from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) spoke about the future of agriculture in the state.

In her opening remarks, Cook said, "My job is to help farmers see that they are a part of the economy and help the rest of Pennsylvania see it as well."

Cook also noted as Pennsylvania looks for ways to strengthen the economy, agriculture should be the first place to look because of its economic impact on the state. She also touched base on the changing face of the state's agriculture.

"The future is very bright — it's the present I am worried about," said Cook as Pennsylvania farmers begin to take a different approach to how they operate their farms.

Cook laid out several alternatives on what farms currently in business might transform into. The metamorphosis included expansion of the operation, the building of a value added product such as moving to organic, or transferring into a different agricultural field.

As she reviewed the possibilities, Cook stressed, "In each case there is a future, but it is different than what we have known."

In her closing remarks, Cook thanked cooperative extension and said as Pennsylvania agriculture grows and changes, there is an educational need and "cooperative extension can meet that (need).

Slaughter Cattle Weekly Review

Oklahoma City, Okla.
November 7, 2003
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL SLAUGHTER CATTLE SUMMARY - Week Ending November 7 - Compared to last week: Slaughter steers and heifers live basis 2.00 to mostly 3.00 higher, dressed basis 6.00 higher. Packer demand very good despite tighter margins. Drop credit has improved significantly over past several weeks and is providing an additional $10.00-$13.00 per head over small beef profits. Monday's very light slaughter of 77,000 set the stage for another slaughter well below a year ago. With increased placements past eight months and light kills growth should be evident in feedlot numbers before long. Boxed beef values Friday a.m. averaged 160.50 up 4.61 from last Friday. Sales of slaughter cattle on a national basis for negotiated cash trades totaled 190,000 head through 10:00 a.m. Friday. Last week's full count was 205,000 head.

MIDWEST DIRECT MARKETS· Steers and Heifers: Live Basis. 35-80 percent Choice, 900-1400 lbs 103.00-108.00, wtd avg 105.00. Dressed Basis. 35-80 percent Choice, 550-950 lbs 163.00-170.00, wtd avg 166.70.

HIGH PLAINS DIRECTS· Steers and Heifers Live Basis. 35-65 percent Choice, 900-1400 lbs 100.00-105.00, wtd avg 103.50

SLAUGHTER COWS AND BULLS. (Average Yielding Prices)· Slaughter cows and bulls steady to 2.00 higher. Packer demand improved for cows as first snows in the north curtailed availablesupplies. Cow runs in the south tapering off earlier than normal in the culling season. High cull prices, some $10/cwt over past several fall culling seasons, encouraged early movement. Given the high price of calves farmers are reluctant to sell older cows that are still viable. USDA's Cutter cow carcass cut-out value closed Thursday at 99.88 up 2.27 from last Thursday.

Calf Summary This week in Lancaster County, slaughter calves sold steady to weak Although, slaughter demand is remaining pretty good, with prices still in the upper 70's and low 80's Holstein bull calves going into special-fed veal barns sold up to 10 00 higher early in the week as prices were mostly in the upper 170 00 range However, demand turned weaker by late in the week as prices were sharply lower at the Thursday graded sale It is no wonder baby calf buyers are being conservative as the finished market continues it's gradual decline Although, some producers do not feel it was a gradual decline as dressed prices are already back in the 200 00-210 00 range The old adage 'what comes up, must come down' has held very true in the veal market over the past few weeks, especially after producers were receiving as much as 350 00 dressed only a couple of months ago The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture graded 1376 head of bulls and heifers at the two graded sales in Lancaster County this week

Milking Shorthorn Assoc. Meets

Members of the New York State Milking Shorthorn Association met in Marathon, N.Y. for the annual fall meeting on Saturday, Nov. 8. The association is planning to sponsor a Milking Shorthorn Show and Heifer Calf Sale during the spring of 2004 at the New York Spring Dairy Carousel Show in Syracuse, New York on the New York State Fair grounds. In front, from left, Gene Lathrop, Lolita White (holding promotional shirt), John Anderson, and Marcia Baker. MARATHON, N.Y. — The New York State Milking Shorthorn Association's annual fall meeting was conducted here at the Town Hall on Saturday, Nov. 8.

The association will participate in the Spring Dairy Carousel Show at the New York State Fairgrounds in April of 2004. Besides a cattle show, they are aslo sponsoring a heifer calf sale. The sale committee includes Harold White, Jerry Merrill, and John Kuszlyk. They will attend an organizational meeting for the Carousel Show on Nov. 19, with the New York Holstein Association, who sponsors the event.

The Carousel Show will be dedicated to the late Margaret Brew of Marbert Farms, Bergen, N.Y.

The New York Association is offering a $100 scholarship to "any junior anywhere" who purchases a heifer during the Milking Shorthorn Heifer Sale. Those accepting the scholarship are expected to become members in the New York Association (fee is $10). The sale is expected to have 10-12 animals from all over the Northeast.

The American Milking Shorthorn Society's annual meeting will be in Plano, Texas on June 16-19. New England will host that annual event in 2007. They hope to give the flavor of the olde New England states, where farms are smaller and the land is hilly and rocky.

The New York Association will commit $500 a year for the purpose of assisting the New England Milking Shorthorn Association in the hosting of the 2007 annual meeting.

The New York Purebred Dairy Cattle Association (NYPDCA) recommends that showman wear only white, no farm names on clothing or hats, in the ring.

Harold White of Marathon was re-elected to a 3-year-term to the NYPDCA. Other members from the Milking Shorthorn breed, on that committee, are John Anderson and Gertrude Lathrop.

The New York State Fair Milking Shorthorn Show will be dedicated to the late Barry Haggett of Fieldcrest Farm, Addison, Ontario.

Wild Game Tamed By Shelly's Cookbook

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

WYOMISSING (Berks Co.) — This is the season when cooks scrounge for good-tasting recipes for the ample provisions game hunters amass.

"If you need recipes for game, you found the right person," said Dale Shelly, Wyomissing.

"Everybody knows I love to cook," Shelly said. "I'm 63 years old and have been cooking for more than 40 years."

He's especially pleased that his original recipes can be prepared by novice cooks.

"I like all kinds of hunting, but I'm a really big goose and duck hunter in the Manheim area," Shelly said.

Unlike many hunters, Shelly especially enjoys preparing his bounty (and also the fish and game fellow hunters give him) into favorite recipes developed over the years.

Through trial and error, Shelly has perfected recipes for jerky, barbecue, chili, marinades, brines, and much more.

"You ought to write a cookbook," friends and coworkers often tell him when he shares samples with them.

People often request his recipes. Shelly, who is semi-retired, decided to take their advice. The result is a 154-page cookbook containing recipes for venison, bear, duck, rabbit, geese, grouse, pheasant, quail, turkey, squirrel, antelope, caribou, elk, moose, mule deer, and more.

The plastic spiral-bound cookbook is attractively printed and easy to read.

"You don't need to be a hunter to use the cookbook," Shelly said. "For those who do not hunt or fish, the recipes can easily be adapted to using any meat desired."

Shelly's cookbook is sold at many hunting supply stores and supermarkets in Lancaster and Berks counties. Shelly also visits several sites periodically to share samples and sell his cookbook. Two upcoming sites are Trout Run Sports, 428 N. Reading Road., Ephrata, on Nov. 21, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Martin's Country Market, Rt. 322, Lincoln, on Nov. 22, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

DALE'S LASAGNA

- 2¼ pounds ground venison
- 2 medium onions, chopped
- 1 large red pepper, chopped
- 2 tablespoons crushed garlic
- 1 tablespoon salt
- ½ teaspoon black pepper
- 12-ounce can tomato paste
- 2 28-ounce cans tomato puree
- 3 15-ounce cans tomato sauce
- 2 tablespoons light brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon crushed oregano
- 2 tablespoons parsley flakes
- ¾ teaspoon basil
- 8-ounce box oven-ready lasagna
- 1 pound ricotta cheese
- 8-ounce can Parmesan cheese
- 1 pound mozzarella cheese, cubed
- 1½ cups white cheddar cheese, grated

Brown the first six ingredients in a large skillet until the onion and pepper are tender. In a large kettle, add the next seven ingredients and simmer. Combine tomato sauce and browned meat mixture and simmer about 10 minutes.

In two deep baking dishes (9x13x2-inches), alternate tomato/meat sauce, lasagna, and cheeses, repeating until dishes are filled, ending with sauce and cheese on the top. Bake uncovered on middle rack at 350 degrees for about an hour or until brown and bubbly.

VENISON POT PIE

- 2 pounds venison roast
- 2 48-ounce cans beef broth
- 2 cups water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- 1 large onion, chopped
- Pinch of saffron
- 4 cups diced potatoes
- 3 large ribs celery, chopped
- 1 tablespoon parsley
- Pot pie dough

Cook venison in beef broth, water, salt, pepper, onion, and saffron until tender (approximately 2 hours). Remove meat from broth and cut in small pieces. Add the potatoes, celery, and parsley to broth and cook until tender. Add meat and simmer. Prepare pot pie dough.

- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1½ cups chopped onions
- 1 cup grated carrots
- ½ teaspoon oregano
- ¼ teaspoon Cajun seasoning
- 4 tablespoons light brown sugar
- 4 tablespoons yellow mustard
- 4 cups ketchup
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon vinegar

In a pressure cooker, cook four rabbits or eight squirrels in 1½ quarts of water and two teaspoons salt for 45 minutes. Or, if you prefer, cook in a five quart kettle in two quarts of water and two teaspoons salt until tender. Cool meat and cut into small pieces.

Combine all of the above ingredients and mix thoroughly. Bring to a boil and simmer for 30 minutes.

PAN FRIED RABBIT

- 2 whole rabbits, cooked and boned
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 6 extra large eggs
- 1 teaspoon ground mustard
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- ½ teaspoon black pepper
- Saltine crackers, finely crushed
- Flour

JERKY

- 7 pounds venison roast (or 3 turkey breasts or 6 chicken breasts)
- 3 teaspoons garlic powder
- 6 teaspoons onion powder
- 6 teaspoons meat tenderizer
- 1½ teaspoons black pepper
- 2 teaspoons ground mustard
- 2 cups soy sauce
- 2 cups Worcestershire sauce
- 1½ cups burgundy or red wine
- 6 teaspoons liquid smoke

Semi-freeze venison roast for easier slicing. Slice into ¼-inch thick strips about 2 inches wide and 3 to 4 inches long. Combine all of the above ingredients in a large bowl. Mix thoroughly and then add venison strips. Marinate in brine 24 hours, turning meat occasionally. Drain brine and place strips on paper towels. Pat dry. Place in oven, dehydrator or smoker. If using oven, place strips on draining grates and set oven temperature to 150 degrees and keep the oven door open approximately four inches. Place foil on bottom of oven (loosely along sides, front, and back so heat can circulate in oven) to catch drippings. After one hour remove foil. Check in three hours, some pieces may be done, although it usually takes between 6 to 8 hours. Pieces should be chewy, not brittle.

This recipe can be used for any large game meat, beef eye roast, or turkey, goose, duck, or chicken breasts.

Newlyweds Share Passion To Teach Kids About FFA Possibilities

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Nathan and Doreen Jamison, Berlin in Somerset County, share ideas as vocational agricultural teachers at the neighboring school districts of Berlin Brothersvalley and Meyersdale Area in Somerset County.

The Jamisons, who met through collegiate FFA at Penn State University and were married on April 5 of this year, never planned to be working in neighboring school districts in two of Somerset County's five vocational agricultural programs but the result has been to the newlyweds' advantage.

Nathan took over the position in Berlin Brothersvalley after Michael Clark left to accept a position at Greenwood High School in Perry County. And, Doreen is a full-time half-year teacher at Meyersdale Area.

"We never planned it this way," said Nathan, who graduated with an agricultural and extension education degree from Penn State University in May of last year. Doreen graduated with a degree in animal science last December from Penn State and is pursuing her teacher certification. It was FFA that put the two together and their shared belief in the program is astounding.

"Everything goes back to FFA," said Nathan. "We have to try to keep agriculture going with the younger generation or it will disappear. I have a lot of farm kids enrolled in FFA, but then I have a large percentage whom are not on farms but have a deep interest in agriculture. Either way, FFA is about improving yourself and your community."

Both Nathan and Doreen were actively involved in their high school FFA programs. Nathan graduated from United High School in Indiana County. Doreen graduated from Williamsburg High School in Blair County.

"FFA sparked my interest and I have a deep fondness for it. I stayed very active in it through high school and college," said Nathan, who first got into FFA in ninth grade.

He did not grow up on a dairy farm but worked extensively on a dairy farm in high school and raised ring-neck pheasants as farming projects for FFA.

Doreen grew up on a family dairy farm in Blair County and learned about a family business with her parents, Durell and Don Delp, and three sisters, including Deanne, a junior at Messiah College, Donna, an 11th grader, and Danielle, a second-grader.

Nathan's parents are Lynn and Deanna Jamison.

"Growing up on a dairy farm taught my sisters and I so much responsibility and a good work ethic," said Doreen, the oldest of the four girls. "Nathan and I are country folks, and we enjoy being here in Somerset County because it reminds us of the rural area we grew up in."

Doyle Paul, longtime vocational agricultural teacher at Berlin Brothersvalley who retired recently, believes the Jamisons are the perfect match for the school districts.

In addition to being the adviser for the Berlin Chapter of Young Farmers, Paul also works through the Center for Professional and Personal Development at Penn State University to supervise new teachers in Western Pennsylvania. He supervises both Jamisons.

"I think that Doreen and Nathan will share ideas and encourage one another," said Paul. "Penn State offers an excellent program these days for their graduating students and the Jamisons have been part of that new learning. They will no doubt be helpful to students in the classroom."

Nathan and Doreen Jamison work together as new vocational agricultural teachers at the Somerset County school districts of Berlin Brothersvalley and Meyersdale Area, respectively. They are both graduates of Penn State University and met through collegiate FFA.

Nathan hopes to continue Paul's "history of excellence," as Nathan describes it, at Berlin and use Paul's many years of experience as a resource.

Berlin has about 100 members from eighth to 12th grade. This year, in support of state FFA president, David Bittner of Berlin, the Berlin chapter attended the national FFA convention in Louisville, Ky., with seven Berlin Brothersvalley members and two from the Meyersdale chapter.

"I try to stress to the younger vo-ag kids," said Nathan, "it's not always about traditional programs in FFA, it's also about leadership and public speaking. These things get you somewhere in life."

He adds: "It breaks your heart a little when you see an agricultural program closing. Unfortunately, agriculture is dwindling to a point, but agriculture is something that will never go away because people will always need food and clothing. That's why we have to keep vocational agricultural and FFA going with younger generations. It's absolutely essential."

Farm Fatality Rates Higher For Seniors

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers aged 75 and older are more than twice as likely to die on the job than their younger counterparts, according to the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH).

NIOSH statistician Dr. John Myers reported that farmers over age 75 had a death rate of 57 per 100,000, compared to an overall death rate of 21 per 100,000 for all agricultural workers.

Much of this increased risk is related to aging and involves a decrease in sensory abilities that can impact the safety of older farmers. Vision is known to be consistent throughout a person's adult life, but begins to decline by age 60.

Hearing also degrades as people age. Nearly one-half of adults have some level of hearing impairment. Some of this is normal; however, hearing loss is also attributed to noise exposure while working.

This is especially true among farmers, who experience the highest rate of hearing loss among all workers.

Hearing protection at an early age is crucial. Ear plugs or ear muffs will protect hearing. Repairing machinery and equipment that are generating excessive noise is also crucial in reducing the exposure.

Penn State Researcher Develops New Process For Pectin Extraction

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A process developed by a researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences to extract high-quality pectin from orange peels may result in a new multi-million dollar American industry.

The new method, called flash extraction of pectin by steam injection, uses a high-temperature, high-speed procedure that appears to be ideal for extracting high quality pectin. The university has applied for a patent on the process.

Pectin is a complex carbohydrate found in fruits. A food additive, it is commonly used to thicken jellies and fruit fillings for pies and other desserts, and historically has been extracted from the peels of citrus.

In 2002, the United States imported more than 5,300 tons of pectin worth more than $56 million. Most pectin extraction is done in Europe using lime peels imported from Mexico and South America. For decades, pectin has been extracted mostly from lime peels by slow cooking. Pectin producers use lime peels because they produce higher-quality pectin than other citrus peels.

But that might be about to change. According to Paul Walker, professor of agricultural engineering, flash-extracted pectin from orange peels is comparable or better than pectin from lime peels. "Of course, we have mountains and mountains of orange peels here because the United States is one of the largest producers of oranges in the world," he says. "About 90 percent of the oranges we grow are used to produce juice."

During a recent sabbatical at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wyndmoor, facility — where he was developing techniques to remove microbiological contaminants from fruits and vegetables — Walker became interested in pectin-extraction research being done there. Partnering with a USDA chemist, he began pondering better, faster ways of extracting pectin from peels.

"They were experimenting with using microwave energy for extraction," says Walker. "As an engineer, I started thinking about the benefits of using steam injection to heat the peels quickly under pressure, and the benefits of extraction at high temperature, with rapid cooling."

So he worked on the problem in his spare time for a year or so, developing equipment to do the process his way. During the research, Walker and his colleagues at Wyndmoor realized, to their delight, that they could get high-quality pectin from orange peels using the new, high-speed, high-temperature process. That discovery could result in the growth of a pectin-extraction industry in the United States using a source — orange peels — that now goes to waste.

"The ramifications of this research are enormous," says Walker. "Big orange juice makers are very interested. It's a simple process, but the best ideas are the simplest. As Einstein said, 'Every thing should be made as simple as possible, but not simpler.'"

FALL...down

Wind-whipped, scudding,
drifting, blowing,
Slithering, blithering, tossing.
Going!
Summer's green now history past.
Our leaves are disappearing.
Fast!
Some float down on gentle air,
Hesitant to land. And, where?
Others fly at break-neck pace
As tho to swiftly end their race.
In corners, crannies, nooks,
they pile
Suggesting that they'll stay awhile.
Once most have tumbled thru
the sky,
We sweep 'em, rake 'em, pile
'em high.
Our cats investigate, peruse
Which piles are softest for a snooze.
The turkeys even honker down
Amidst the leaf piles, gold and brown.
One balmy morn, I grab a rake
Some neatness in the yard to make.
And hope that we can move 'em
out
Before a gust blows them about.
Beneath one pile, all crisp
and crunchy,
A bone that Derra finds quite munchy.
Another hides a snail, so small,
Parked right beside a stray
golf ball.
A garden hose, three flower pots
A length of twine tied up in knots.
One rubber boot, an ear of corn
An old balloon, now badly torn.
This raking leaves is not a bore,
Surprising finds speed up the chore.
Still, I am glad when they are all
And that job's done...
'til another Fall.

POW's and MIA's... We Should Never Forget.

Amidst their hardships and tribulations, America's fighting men and women have always taken comfort in their favorite songs of faith. These songs have helped to keep strong their belief in their God, and their love for their country, which has asked of them great sacrifices for the sake of their fellow Americans. To serve these wonderful men and women Cristy Lane worked more than 120 shows in Vietnam during the Vietnam War. It was Cristy's way of keeping faith with the troops, at a time when many Americans were turning their backs on them. As long as she lives, she will never forget the faces of these young men and women. On August 27, 2003 the VFW formally inducted Cristy into the VFW Hall of Fame in San Antonio at their National Convention. And now Cristy Lane is proud to present a special CD of songs of faith to our Veterans of Foreign Wars, many of whom she met in the jungles of Southeast Asia.

These are the most requested songs of faith of all time, including Cristy's #1 country hit from 1980, the timeless classic, "One Day At A Time." These songs have been selected especially for you, America's veterans, who know so well the meaning of faith, and the value of a great song of faith.

God bless and take it one day at a time.
—Cristy

Be On Watch For Nutty Health Claims

"I've been eating more nuts lately because I know they're good for you, but my wife doesn't believe it. Is there firm evidence?"Well, you two could very well be dueling nutritional scientists, because even they haven't come to an agreement on whether nuts are "good for you" — as in helping protect against heart disease — or not. But there is at least some evidence that the mono- and poly-unsaturated fats and possibly the phytochemicals found in nuts can be good for the heart. And, nuts have fiber, too.

But beware. Grabbing a handful of nuts here and there and popping them like vitamin pills won't do you much good, unless you need to put on a few pounds. One and half ounces of nuts — about one-third of a cup, the amount usually recommended for potential heart-healthy benefits — contains about 250 calories. If you simply add this to your daily diet, those extra calories will add up to 3,500 in just 14 days. Adding 3,500 calories to your diet without increasing activity will add a pound to your weight. Over the course of a year, you could put on 26 pounds by adding 1.5 ounces of nuts to your daily diet.

What you can do is substitute nuts for other high-calorie foods you currently consume. Do you keep a package of potato chips in the cupboard for snacking? One-and-a-half ounces of regular potato chips contain about 230 calories. A 1.5-ounce chocolate bar contains about 235 calories. A 20-ounce bottle of cola has about 260 calories.

You can also substitute nuts for protein foods in your diet: A 3-ounce broiled burger (80 percent lean ground beef) contains 230 calories. Three and a half ounces of dark-meat chicken (roasted, with the skin) contains 255 calories. A nut-based dish, such as a vegetable stir-fry with almonds, could be a good alternative.

And be discriminating about what nuts you choose: almonds, hazelnuts, pecans, pistachios, walnuts and peanuts are the only ones that can use a newly approved qualified health claim that "Scientific evidence suggests, but does not prove, that eating 1.5 ounces of most nuts as part of a diet low in saturated fat and cholesterol may reduce the risk of heart disease." Brazil nuts, cashews, macadamia nuts didn't make the cut.

The Picky Eater

Has mealtime become a battleground between you and your preschooler?

The same spirit of independence that a parent rewards when his child is able to dress himself, becomes a less attractive quality when it results in a picky eater at mealtime.

It's important to put it all in perspective. The preschool years are marked by bouts of independence and are a natural part of growing up. Certain techniques and strategies will help parents to cope with the young, opinionated eater and ease mealtime struggles.

Should you worry that your child is not getting a nutritious diet? During this period, a child's growth slows down a bit and your child may really not be hungry. It is important that a child listens to what his body is saying and does not learn to eat when he is really not hungry. That's a bad habit that gets a lot of adults in trouble! At this age, a child is also more interested in exploring the world than eating.

A portion size is one tablespoon for each year of a preschooler's age. This means that a serving for a four-year-old is only one-quarter cup! Not very much by adult standards. When you look at it this way, most children are eating better than their parents think.

Is your child eating a variety of foods? To determine this, you really need to look at more than one day. If your child didn't have anything from the dairy group today, that might not be a reason to worry. If she hasn't had any dairy products for the last week, it's time to get creative. Make pudding, offer ice cream or cream soups, macaroni and cheese-whatever your child is likely to eat.

Continue to offer new foods — but remember, many children need to be offered a new food 8 to 10 times before they try it and accept it.

Don't give up. Offer new foods with familiar, well-liked foods and let your child see you eating and enjoying the new food.

Most important, remember that no childhood phase lasts forever! Soon your picky eater will go through a growth spurt and be willing to eat just about anything.

In the meantime, keep mealtime pleasant and relaxing. Respect your child's likes and dislikes. After all as adults, each of us has foods we don't like.

'Diet-Breaker' Fills Pantry With Unusual Preserves

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

ELKTON, Md. — "I'm known as the diet breaker," James Coffey said as a challenge to those who claim they are on a diet.

It's difficult to refuse his assortment of homemade pumpkin and pecan pies and freshly baked apple cake.

The pastry chef and accomplished cook likes to share his culinary specialties with friends and neighbors. In addition to pies, cookies, and cakes, Coffey preserves food that most people have never tasted.

His basement shelves are filled with such items as green tomato mincemeat, preserves of elderberry, blackberry, crab apple, and Concord grapes, and spiced peaches. Jars of canned pork sausage, pork tenderloin, beef, chicken, meatballs, and even meatloaf can be found in his canning cupboards.

He even makes his own soap from bacon grease that he purifies and treats with vinegar and water.

The kitchen has always held a special fascination for Coffey, who grew up watching his grandmother cook and can.

When he attended Baltimore International Cooking School, Coffey knew much more about cooking and baking than his classmates. Unlike them, he grew up knowing how to make seven-minute boiled icing similar to that made for the commercial market.

Although he works as a pastry chef, Coffey said, "I like to bake and can food more than I like to cook. I prefer exact measurements and the precise steps required."

Times have changed since Coffey first learned kitchen basics. Methods once used in canning food are no longer recommended.

It has been difficult for Coffey to adjust to processing foods in pressure canning since he has had so much experience in water bath canning. But Coffey said home economists constantly remind him of the dangers of following old methods.

Although Coffey has learned to adapt his recipes to the approved methods, he enjoys reading old cookbooks and modifying old recipes to improve them.

Some recipes, he believes, can't be improved. For example, he prefers to cook down fruit to make jellies and jams the old-fashioned way, instead of using packaged pectin.

He continues to make apple butter the old-fashioned way that his grandmother learned growing up in Virginia. He doesn't add cider, but oil of cinnamon and oil of cloves to keep it from darkening. This, he said, results in a "more red" color.

"I'm the cook, and she's the dishwasher," James Coffey said of the agreement reached by him and his mother, Mary Coffey.

He makes spaghetti sauce, chili sauce, taco soup, and rhubarb punch.

He estimates that he preserves 100-200 jars filled with produce or meat annually. Some of his specialties are canning pork sausage, beef, chicken, meatballs, and meatloaf. He explained that meatloaf is placed uncooked in a wide-mouth jar. After pressure canning, the meatloaf shrinks so that it can easily slip out of the jar when ready to serve.

Another unusual item he cans is pecans. He packs nuts in clean, dry jars, seals with lids and processes in the oven at 250 degrees for 45 minutes. "Turn off the oven, but let cool 30 minutes before opening the oven door or the jars will break," Coffey said.

He enters many of his items in the Cecil County, Maryland and Delaware fairs.

He's even written some articles about preserving food for some issues of Old Order Amish newspapers.

He lives with his mother Mary Coffey in the home in which he grew up. He cooks, and she washes the dishes.

"I like anything he makes," his mother said. "I don't cook. I do awful things to food."

Although he relies on his neighbor's garden for most of the produce he preserves, Coffey continues to grow his own saffron, which at this time of the year continues to produce stamens that must be gathered daily.

Coffey's passion for cooking has led him into collecting old jars, canning supplies, and cookbooks. Turn to the Antiques Center on page B23 to read about his collection of 3,000 cookbooks and other culinary-related items.

Although it is a bit late in the harvesting season, here are a few canning recipes from Coffey. He makes chowchow this time of the year using vegetables he canned earlier in the season and cauliflower in season.

PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH CHOWCHOW

1 quart lima beans
1 quart corn, cut off the cob
1 quart green beans
1 quart yellow beans
1 quart cauliflower
1 quart kidney beans (canned), drained, rinsed
1 quart green peppers
1 quart red peppers
1 quart celery
1 quart carrots
1 quart onions

Syrup for each 6 quarts:
1 quart cider vinegar
6 cups granulated sugar
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 tablespoon mustard seed
3 drops oil of cinnamon
3 drops oil of cloves (Measure oils on sugar and count drops. Do not overdo).

Clean and prepare all vegetables for table use. Cook each vegetable separately until crisp-tender. Most fresh vegetables will cook in 10 to 20 minutes (beans, celery, carrots, and cauliflower), while peppers, corn, and onions will cook in only 4 or 5 minutes. For frozen ones, heat only to thaw, but do not cook.

When done, drain all vegetables thoroughly and mix with hands gently in a large bowl or pan to combine. Pack mixed vegetables in pint or quart jars.

Make syrup by mixing vinegar, sugar, seed, and oil in a large saucepan (not aluminum) and bring to a rolling boil. Make sure all sugar is dissolved. Fill jars with syrup (fill only to jar neck with both vegetables and syrup). Wipe jar rims clean and make sure no seed is on the rims or they will not seal.

Seal jars according to the instructions on the brand lids used. Process (cold pack) for 10 minutes for pint jars and 15 minutes for quart jars in boiling water bath. Cool and test for seals.

This will make 12 to 15 quarts.

TACO SOUP

3 pounds lean ground beef
1-2 packages taco seasoning mix (to desired taste)
2 small onions, chopped
1 quart corn
1 quart water
1 quart pizza sauce
Sugar to taste
2 15-ounce cans chili beans

Brown ground beef and onions. Add remaining ingredients and simmer 15 minutes. (One package of taco seasoning may be enough for your taste. Two packages make it quite spicy). Fill jars, leaving one-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims and seal. In pressure canner, cook 60 minutes for pints and 75 minutes for quarts at 10-11 pounds pressure. Makes 7-9 quarts.

PUMPKIN BUTTER

16 cups pureed pumpkin
8 cups light brown sugar
4-6 teaspoon pumpkin pie spice

Combine all ingredients and cook until thick (in oven at 350 degrees or on stove top). Fill half-pint or pint jars with hot pumpkin butter. Leave ½-1-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims. Seal and process in pressure canner at 10 pounds pressure for 10 minutes. Makes 7-8 pints.

CANNED PORK SAUSAGE

10 pounds ground pork
¼ cup canning salt
½ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon sage
1 teaspoon black pepper
⅛-¼ teaspoon red pepper

For another variation, add 1 tablespoon Tenderquick, a meat curing salt. Mix together ingredients. Shape seasoned sausage into patties that will fit into wide-mouth jar. Place sausage patties on a sheet pan and bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Pack hot sausage patties into clean jars. Discard grease. Wipe jar rims. Seal. Pressure can at 10 pounds pressure for 75 minutes for pints or 90 minutes for quarts.

Sausage can also be raw packed into jars. Leave one-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims. Seal and process as above. This is good for casseroles or for sausage gravy. Pack rather tightly. Do not overdo it or jars will burst.

Coffey shows off a few of his basement shelves filled with such items as green tomato mincemeat, preserves of elderberry, blackberry, crab apple, and Concord grapes, and spiced peaches. Jars of canned pork sausage, pork tenderloin, beef, chicken, meatballs, and even meatloaf can be found in his canning cupboards.

Winter Canning — Part 2

Today's article includes ideas for winter canning using the boiling water bath canner. These recipes contain sufficient amounts of high acid foods or sugar to prevent bacteria growth. Soft spreads, relishes, and syrups fall into this category.

Relishes are prepared using chopped fruits or vegetables cooked in a spicy vinegar solution. Sugar may be added for a sweet relish, and hot peppers or other spices may be added for a hot relish. Cranberry apple relish makes a nice topping for meats and sandwiches. Cooked whole cranberry sauce can be canned with only 10 minutes processing time.

With the help of the freezer and dry storage, relish ingredients are available year round. Frozen corn can be used in a corn relish. Onions in dry storage can be used in a plain onion relish, pepper-onion relish, or combined with frozen rhubarb for Victoria relish.

Many relish recipes call for red or green peppers. Store bought peppers can be expensive out of season. However, you can freeze peppers during the summer when they are abundant. Wash, dry, cut, remove seeds, and freeze using the individually quick freeze method. Spread chopped peppers or halves one layer deep on a tray and freeze until solid; package in a vapor proof container and freeze.

Chutneys are a combination of vegetables or fruits, spices, and vinegar cooked for long periods to develop flavor and texture. They are highly spiced and have a sweet-sour combination of flavors. Many chutneys such as dried apricot date chutney contain raisins and other dried fruits. Some contain nuts.

Even pickles can be made in late fall and winter. Pickled cauliflower and spiced pickled cabbage use late crop vegetables.

Three bean salad, a convenient ready to use product, can be made using canned and frozen beans. Cocktail onions can be pickled. Pineapple makes a nice fruit pickle. If dill is needed for winter pickles, it can be frozen when fresh. Wrap it in foil to prevent odors from getting into other foods.

Spreads such as jams, jellies, and conserves can be made from fall and winter fruits such as cranberries, apples, and oranges. Earlier fruits that have been frozen without added sugar can be thawed and used in spreads. If the fruit has been frozen with added sugar, it will be necessary to know the amount of sugar that was added in order to have a proper set or jell.

If you freeze your own fruit and keep a record of the amount of sugar added, you will be able to subtract that amount from the tested recipe. However, you will need to use pectin that combines the sugar and fruit before the pectin is added. This is usually the liquid-type pectin. Frozen fruit is also suitable for long cooking spread recipes.

Recipes developed for use with commercially canned, bottled, or frozen juices can be found on pectin packages.

Apple or grape jelly made from bottled juice is very easy to make. Cranberry cider jelly uses bought juices, and cherry almond jam is made from frozen cherries.

Conserves are jam like products made by cooking two or more fruits with sugar to a jam like consistency. The traditional nuts and raisins in a conserve can be combined with canned pineapple, apples, or dried fruits for a specialty spread.

When dried fruits are added to a conserve, no sugar is needed to provide sweetness making it a spread suitable for special diets. Pineapple apricot conserve and apple cinnamon conserve are examples. Ambrosia conserve uses canned or fresh pineapple, maraschino cherries, almonds, and coconut for a tropical treat.

Other winter canning ideas include flavored vinegar using fresh or dried herbs and specialty syrups. Maple walnut syrup and apple cinnamon syrup contain plenty of flavor making them suitable for a special gift.

Remember that all the above recipes need to be processed to destroy harmful bacteria, molds, and yeast that can cause spoilage.

ANSWER — Luci Essig, Bernville, wanted trifle recipes. Thanks to Barbara Hege, Chambersburg, for sending two, and to Frances Homa, Alpha. If you can't find them at your supermarket, items are available by mail-order from The Nut Factory, P.O. box 815, Greenacres, WA 99016 or call toll-free (888) 239-5288.

Pumpkin Trifle

9x13-inch spice cake, cut into cubes
2 cups whipped topping
2 cups cooked pumpkin
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ginger
2½ cups cold milk
2 3.4-ounce package instant vanilla pudding
2 3.4-ounce package instant butterscotch pudding

Combine last seven ingredients. In a large glass bowl, layer cubed cake, pumpkin mixture and whipped topping. Repeat layers.

Heavenly Cherry Angel Food Trifle

5 cups angel food cake cubes
1 cup confectioners' sugar
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
8-ounces whipped topping
21-ounce can cherry pie filling
½ cup toasted chopped pecans

In a medium bowl, combine confectioner's sugar and cream cheese. Reserve 2 tablespoons whipped topping. Fold remaining topping in cream cheese mixture. Place cake cubes in bowl. Pour topping mixture over cake cubes with pecans and mix well. Spread cherry pie filling (blueberry, strawberry, raspberry or other toppings may be substituted) over top. Cover and refrigerate at least three hours. Garnish with reserved topping. Yield: 8-10 servings.

Sponge Trifle

4 slices light sponge cake
Raspberry or strawberry jam
6-8 macaroons
¼ pint medium or sweet sherry
1 ounce almonds, blanched, shredded
½ pint custard sauce OR ¼ pint custard and ¼ pint whipped cream folded together
¼ cup chantilly cream
1 tablespoon chopped toasted blanched almonds
Glace Cherries
Angelica, a herb from the parsley family
Grated rind of 1 lemon

Cover half the sliced sponge cake with raspberry or strawberry jam. Place the uncovered sides on top. Cut into fingers. Arrange the sponge cake pieces in a glass bowl. Put the macaroons on top. If they are too big, cut them in half. Trickle the sherry over the cake and macaroons. Sprinkle on the lemon rind and almonds. Pour on the custard or the custard and cream. Sprinkle the whole surface with chopped toasted almonds. This prevents a skin from forming on the custard. Decorate the trifle with piped chantilly cream and with glace cherries and angelica.

Fruit Trifle

Use layers of pureed or chopped stewed fruit between the slices of sponge cake instead of jam. Drain the fruit well before using it — you want a stiff puree or fairly solid fruit mixture. If it's too wet, the trifle will be soggy.

Chantilly Cream

¼ pint double cream
Pinch salt
½-1 tablespoon icing sugar
1-2 drops vanilla essence

Half whip the cream. Sift the salt and sugar on the cream. Add vanilla essence. Whip again to mix in the ingredients and continue whipping until cream is as stiff as desired.

Custard

1-ounce custard powder
1 pint milk
4-ounces sugar

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

By this time of year most of my activities are indoors. There are lots of things to do indoors. I have many letters to sort and old papers to look over. Soon I hope to embroider some pillowcases. And, of course, there is always cleaning to do.

I did manage to plant a number of tulips and crocus bulbs in the yard and flower beds. The evening of the day that I planted them there were two deer near the kitchen window sniffing around. They finished all of the rhubarb chard that I had planted in the garden.

There are a number of summer cottages on our farm and one of them was badly damaged by a very large tree that fell across it. When I went fishing, one last time before winter, I noticed the damage and doubt that it can be repaired. There are many secluded places along the Conestoga River.

The grandchildren have been staying here every now and then. They are well behaved and like to look at some of my old things. Gregory asked to try his hand at using a pen with a bottle of ink. He decided that a ball point pen was much easier to use. I shall have to find a better pen for him. When they sleep here, we can have breakfast together.

My family members have to travel quite a bit on business. Their companies send them to faraway places. One is in Japan for a week, another spends a month in Seattle, and another spends a few days in Indianapolis.

I think my time for flying off to such places is in the past. I'm not even anxious to drive out of state. But, at one time I thought nothing of traveling across the United States by car or by train. Even flying to Hawaii was considered to be a lot of fun and adventurous. Now home seems pretty nice.

Somerset County Youngster Wins International Competition

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — For 10-year-old Mary Kimmel of Somerset, showing dairy cows is something that just comes naturally.

"I really liked showing my cow 'Jumper' last year and then I just kept showing this year with 'Jive'," she said with a smile.

Mary, the daughter of Jennifer and Dan Kimmel, is a fourth-grader in the Somerset County Home Schooler's program.

She may be young and little but she is definitely mighty, even if it comes to a heifer stepping on her toes. She's not afraid of her animal or of competition with older students.

In fact, she and her parents went to the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis., in September. Mary was one of the youngest competitors in her class of the Red and White Holstein division and she won first place and honorable mention there. She was also a finalist in the national showmanship contest.

There were 281 Red and White Holsteins altogether in an international show where 77 countries were represented with 1,170 entries and 55,000 people attended.

"At first I wasn't sure if 'Jive' was going to go into the ring, but I thought 'we didn't come all this way for nothing,' so 'Jive' just kicked up and went," said Mary.

Mary's parents agree that it was an experience of a lifetime not only for the 10-year-old but also for the whole family.

"It's an honor to have a cow good enough to go to this show so we were all very happy about it," said Dan Kimmel, who showed dairy cows in high school and whose always been intrigued with bloodlines and the Red and White breed.

Dan and his wife, the former Jennifer Barnett, actually met through showing dairy cows at the Somerset County Fair in the late 1980s.

Jennifer's father, Dr. Albert Barnett, a longtime local veterinarian, showed animals while he was in high school so Mary becomes the third generation to take an interest in showing animals.

Mary plans to become a veterinarian someday like her grandfather. Mary is a member of Horse and Rider 4-H Club in Somerset and has also shown her horses 'Missy,' a Pony of America (POA), and 'Trinket,' an American Quarter Horse.

"My grandfather always tells me that time is never wasted when you spend it with your animal," said Mary, who spends an average of 10 hours a week with her dairy cow 'Jive' and other animals.

'Jive' won this summer at the Harrisburg Eastern National Show and had also taken top prizes at New Castle, Lebanon, Somerset and Maryland shows.

During the Harrisburg show, the remark was made to the Kimmels that the Madison, Wis., show was "no place for a little girl to go."

That didn't intimidate Mary.

"We never expected to enter at the Madison show. We thought we would wait to see how she did at the Harrisburg show," explained her mother Jennifer. "When she won at the Harrisburg show, we decided to go as a family and it was a great experience for all of us. A friend took the cow to Ohio and then onto to Wisconsin, and we drove out together."

The Kimmels stopped in each state along the way and got a souvenir postcard and when they arrived at the show, they were impressed with the facility as well as the show. They explained that an orchestra came out to play for the Grand Champions and Japan and Mexico were most represented with entries.

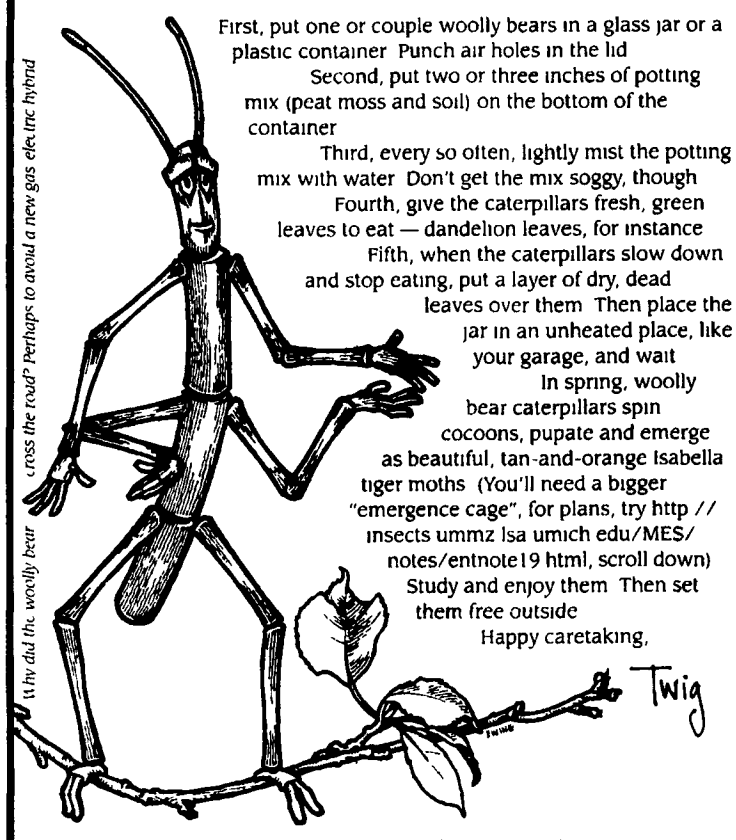
"We've grown as a family," said Dan. "We work as a unit. Mary picks up a little more responsibility each year and what I've noticed is that she knows she has to water and feed her animals before she can play. She's growing up in a good way."

Mary Kimmel, a 10-year-old 4-H student in Somerset County, might be young but she is also determined. Kimmel won in the Red and White Holstein division at the Madison, Wis., international dairy show in September. Here, she is pictured with 'Jive,' her junior calf.

The Kimmels of Somerset have grown as a family through dairy cow showing. Mary Kimmel, a ten-year-old 4-Her who won an international show with her junior calf 'Jive,' and her parents, Dan and Jennifer Kimmel, enjoy working with their animals.

Smart Stuff with Twig Walkingstick

Dear Twig: My sister caught a woolly bear caterpillar. She'd like to keep it until spring. What's the best way to take care of woolly bears in fall and winter?



Why did the woolly bear cross the road? Perhaps to avoid a new gas electric hybrid

First, put one or couple woolly bears in a glass jar or a plastic container Punch air holes in the lid

Second, put two or three inches of potting mix (peat moss and soil) on the bottom of the container

Third, every so often, lightly mist the potting mix with water Don't get the mix soggy, though

Fourth, give the caterpillars fresh, green leaves to eat — dandelion leaves, for instance

Fifth, when the caterpillars slow down and stop eating, put a layer of dry, dead leaves over them Then place the jar in an unheated place, like your garage, and wait

In spring, woolly bear caterpillars spin cocoons, pupate and emerge as beautiful, tan-and-orange Isabella tiger moths (You'll need a bigger "emergence cage", for plans, try http // insects ummz lsa umich edu/MES/ notes/entnote19 html, scroll down)

Study and enjoy them Then set them free outside

Happy caretaking,

Twig

Food Chest Dangers

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Food chests used for tailgating or picnics can be added to the list of dangerous items when small children are around. Frequently, children playing "Hide-and-seek" find a large-size cooler and ice boxes in campers a deceptively good hiding place.

When the door is slammed shut the tight-fitting gasket on the device cuts off the air to the child. This, along with the insulated construction of the appliance, also prevents the child's screams from being heard. For safety's sake:

- Know where ice chests are located in your house, garage or recreational vehicles.
- Attach a safety door or interlock device to prevent entrapment accidents.
- Keep children away from coolers still in use.
- Lock the door to utility rooms and warn children not to play there.
- If a child is missing, the food chest should be among the first places checked.

Hayrides: A Real Nightmare

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With the fall harvest season moving quickly across the nation, the popularity of hayrides as a fundraiser or social event is growing in many communities. Reports of accidents involving hayrides have been on the increase over the past several years. Unless these events are well organized and carefully monitored, tragedy may be just around the next corner.

One way to approach the planning and coordination of a hayride is to consider the three H's — Hitching, Highways, and Horseplay. Hitching includes the wagon, the tractor or truck that is pulling the wagon, and the safeguards that are used to ensure that the wagon is properly attached. Never attach more than one wagon behind the pulling vehicle. Extra wagons make the "snaking" action of the caravan more severe and may result in sideswiping or overturning of the trailing wagons. A truck or tractor should never pull a wagon so fast that it sways out of a straight line.

Proper hitching should always include: using a well designed hitch pin with a clip or lock between the wagon and the pulling vehicle, and installing safety chains to ensure that the wagon does not disconnect while in motion.

The hayride route should be carefully planned. Highways with excessive vehicular traffic moving at high rates of speed should be avoided at all costs. Hayride organizers should consult with local law enforcement agencies to seek their advice on roads to be used. Some law enforcement agencies may also be willing to provide security and safety for the hayride during the actual event. One recommendation that may reduce the highway hayride hazard is vehicles traveling in front and in back of the hyride with their emergency lights activated.

Horseplay on a hayride has the potential for disaster, thus adult monitoring of the hayride is a must. Hayride participants can easily fall from a wagon or truck being used for the event and be run over by the wagon and truck wheels causing traumatic injuries. All riders should be sitting down while the wagon or truck is moving. These rules should be clearly stated to all participants before the ride begins.

Dairy Princess Shana Mack visits with Bill and Elaine Wood at Brookwood View Dairy, where the barn houses 60 milking Holsteins.

Dairy Princess Spotlights Brookwood View Farms

JACKSON (Susquehanna Co.) — Susquehanna Dairy Princess Shana Mack chooses to spotlight Brookwood View Farms this month.

The farm is owned and operated by Bill and Elaine Wood, and is located in Jackson. Bill and Elaine were both raised on dairy farms. Elaine at Fiddle Lake and Bill on the farm they live on today.

Bill's grandfather bought the farm in 1938 and Bill's parents, George and Elva, started farming on the farm in 1940 with six cows and two horses. George retired in 1984 and Bill and Elaine took over the farm. The barn is a tie stall barn, housing 60 milking Holsteins. They own 150 acres and rent an additional 100 acres.

The Woods raise mixed hay and feed corn meal and grain along with the hay to their herd. The Woods worked with the Chesapeake Bay program to put in a stone barn year.

Bill sells all his calves to be raised elsewhere and has first option to buy them back at breeding age.

Some unique things about this farm are that the entire farm and house operates from one spring and always has more than enough water. The barn has an automatic round bale feeder that passes in front of the cows. This was the first and one of few automatic bale feeders in the state.

Bill also likes to collect and restore tractors. As of right now he has an International H, M and Super C two of which were his father-in-law's. They also are "Dairy of Distinction Award" recipients.

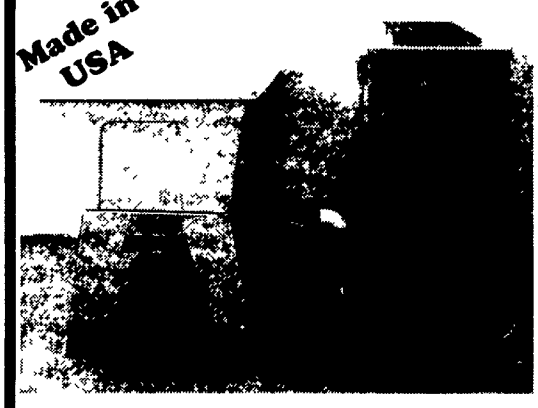
Heat with Corn!



Burn Shelled Corn In This Biomass Furnace
A BETTER ALTERNATIVE
The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed. There's no need to load the furnace several times a day. The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved.

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Professor Higbee's maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind.

—Howard Brant, THE NEWARK STAR-LEDGER

"It is in showing where to find out-of-the-way trout streams that makes the map such a treasure to the fisherman "
—Joe Gordon, TRIBUNE-DEMOCRAT, Johnstown

Pre-Harvest Strategies Have Role In Food Safety

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Scientific experts and food industry leaders presented today an impressive array of research findings aimed at reducing foodborne pathogens in livestock prior to slaughter. The briefings were given at a public meeting hosted by USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS).

"The importance of beef safety cannot be overstated," says Mike Engler, chairman of the Joint Beef Industry Beef Safety Subcommittee and president of Cactus Feeders in Amarillo, Tex. "Science and technology are definitely our strongest weapons in the fight against foodborne pathogens in beef cattle."

Engler highlighted a number of successful intervention strategies developed and in use today in processing facilities such as carcass rinses, steam pasteurization, hot water pasteurization, steam vacuuming, Lactoferrin, and cattle cleaning systems. Feed additives such as lactobacillus acidophilus and Tasco 14TM are currently available to producers and were also discussed.

"Cattle producers have played a key role in these research efforts," Engler says. "It's estimated that roughly 80 percent of the technologies and methodologies implemented by the industry are the result of checkoff-funded beef safety research."

The beef industry boosted its beef safety efforts in January of this year with the coordination of the checkoff-funded E.coli Summit where more than 200 industry leaders collectively pledged to further reduce the incidence of E.coli O157:H7 in the beef supply.

Attendees committed to implementing a series of industry-wide actions to achieve this goal. As part of its policy division, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) met with officials at USDA and the Food and Drug Administration to call for a more cooperative approach to foster coordinated strategies and research efforts.

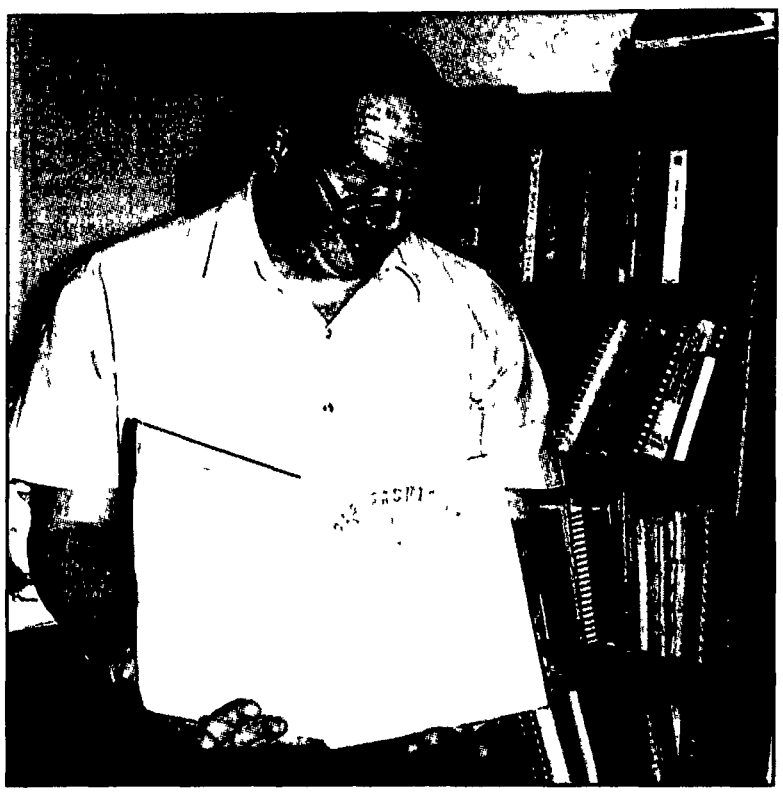
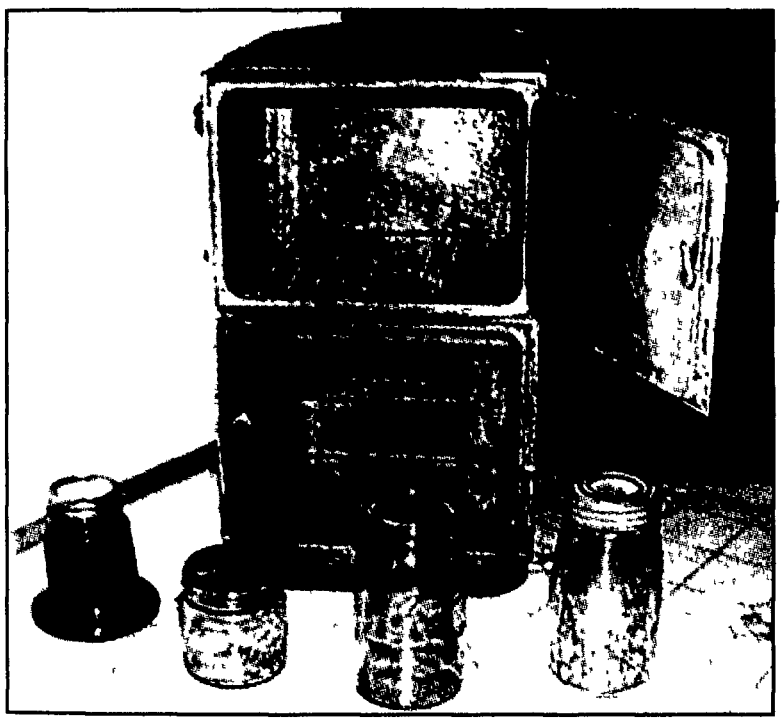
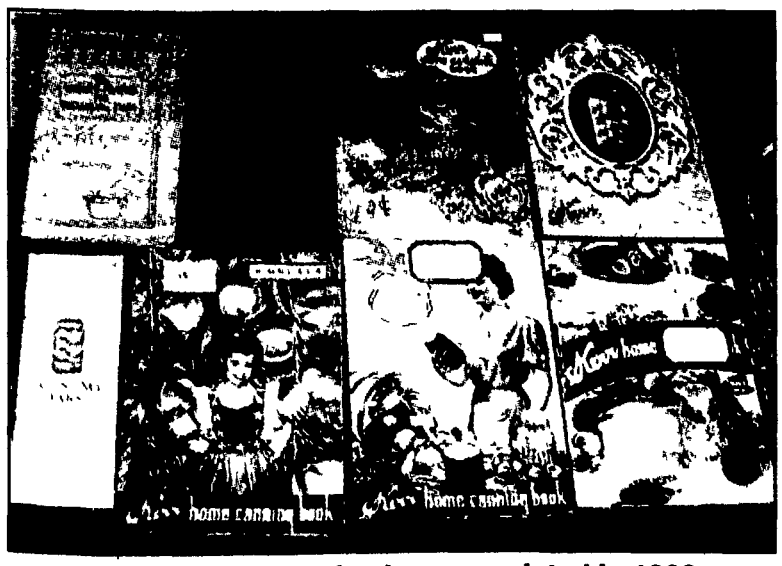
Antiques Center



James Coffey has collected more than 3,000 cookbooks, pamplets, and brochures because he loves to study recipes and compare them with today's methods.



This old canner called a Conservo was manufactured between 1900-1920. It holds 14 quart jars. A tray in the bottom held water. The conservo was set on a stove and the water brought to a boil in order to process the food inside the jar. Although this method is no longer recommended or considered safe, it helps show a part of household history. Surrounding the Conservo are some old jars Coffey has collected: a Kerr economy jar with original clamp lid from 1903, a limited-edition Kerr Liberty Bell jar manufactured for America's Bicentennial, and a Ball standard jar, which required a wax seal in the early 1900s.



Early Ball and Kerr books were printed in 1909.

Chef Collects Cookbooks, Canning Supplies

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

ELKTON, Md. — Antique collections often begin from hobbies or career interests.

Such is the case of James Coffey, who has more than 3,000 "old" cookbooks and numerous canning-related antiques.

Coffey grew up watching his grandmother cook and can food from the garden. Soon his grandmother was relying on his help in the process — a job Coffey relished.

"I memorized the canning processes and the times required," Coffey said.

Although the old-fashioned method of water canning has been updated with the pressure canning process in his own kitchen, Coffey still retains the information absorbed from watching his grandmother.

His interest in baking influenced his decision to attend Baltimore International Culinary Arts. Since then, Coffey continues to work as a professional pastry chef.

He lives with his mother Mary Coffey in the Elkton community where he grew up. The two have honed a partnership in the kitchen where he cooks and his mother washes the dishes and helps with some food prep work.

When he is not in the kitchen, Coffey can be found pouring over cookbooks that he reads for pleasure or canvassing the Internet and yard sales in search of additional cookbooks to add to his collection.

Although he has some newer cookbooks, Coffey much prefers the "old" ones, especially those printed by canning companies and by Amish and Mennonite communities.

He has hundreds of pamphlets and booklets that he preserves in archival binders and files.

One of those he most values is "Handy Housekeeper" printed by Farm Journal in 1886.

In addition to recipes, the book includes articles on the art of soap making, the care of household pets, the process of butchering and canning, drying foods, and even instruction about proper manners and etiquette.

"Ask him to find a recipe or a cookbook, and he can find it immediately," his mother said. "I don't know how," she said as she shakes her head at the mass accumulation of cookbooks that can be found in every room of the house. In addition to seven bookcases, Coffey has stacks of his collection stored in boxes.

Coffey frequents yard sales, flea markets, and paper sales in search of rare finds. Finding missing copies of a series of printed cookbooks is especially rewarding to Coffey. He tries to accumulate every piece of literature published by Kerr, Ball, Altrista, Bernadin, Golden Harvest, and other canning companies, even those from Canada and Germany.

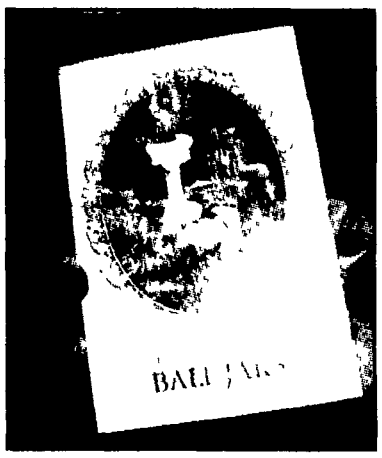
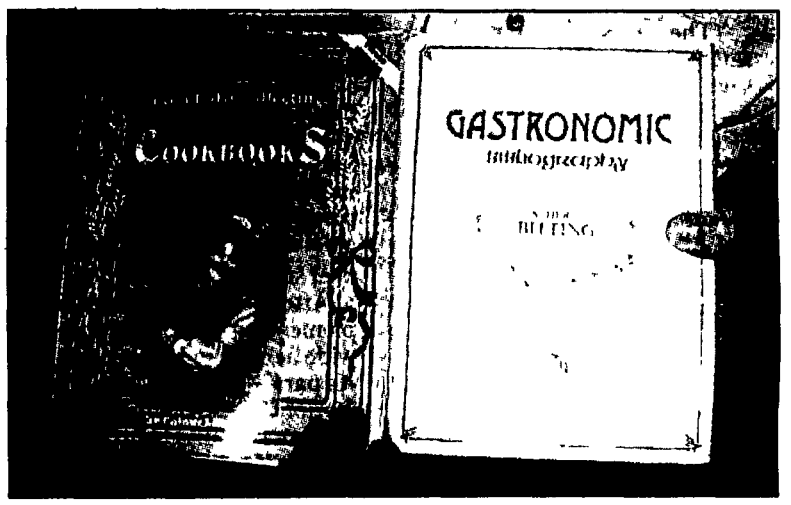
In 1886, "Farm Journal" published the Handy Housekeeper, which Coffey preserves in an archival binder.



Coffey uses these books to help him determine prices and history of his collection: "Collector's Guide to Ball Jars" by William Brantley and "A Guide to Collecting Cookbooks" by Col. Bob Allen.



"Gastronomic Bibliography" by Katherine Bitting was printed in 1939 and reprinted in 1981. The cookbook author gave Coffey her personal copy with her notes, because she wanted her private collection preserved by a Kerr collector.

Ringing Up High Prices

Can you provide me with any information regarding antique or old toy grocery stores, and tell me where I can find possibly find one for my wife in time for Christmas?

Charles Gordon
Virginia Beach, VA

Some of the most charming toys made in the past were little toy grocery stores with shelves stocked with miniature boxes, cans, and cartons of foodstuffs just like those sold in actual grocery stores today. Such toy stores were popular in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, and sold for a pittance back then. Today, however they can ring up high prices depending on their condition and completeness.

The earliest examples were made of wood, wood and pasteboard, heavy cardboard, and wood and glass. Later models were made of lithographed tin or steel, or from a combination of tin and cardboard.

One early example, measuring 19½x12x2½-inches, was made of wood and pasteboard, and has a pair of pasteboard doors which opened to reveal a row of eight wooden fully-stocked shelves. A paper label on the back is imprinted "Miniature Corner Store, Arlington Heights, Mass., Patent pending."

Such stores are highly desirable, and sometimes can be found among family possessions in New England attics. Some of the food packages belonging to the toy store are imprinted with the name of a product such as Slade's Pure Mace, Sawyer's Crystal Bluing, Upton's Liquid Fish Glue, or a food such as gingersnaps, corn starch, ice cream, and many other foods on cartons and cans, all of which were made of wood covered with paper labels stating what food or product was represented, and the letters MCS (for Miniature Corner Store) which identifies such pieces.

In the early 1890s, Parker Brothers produced The Amusing Game of Corner Grocery that came with 40 illustrated grocery cards marked with prices, and more than 100 pieces representing money to play the game. Parker Brothers also produced numerous Toy Town Grocery Stores in various sizes — the smallest being the Little Toy Town Grocery store consisting of a little store with shelves, counter, and goods that was assembled by putting he box on its end and filling it with grocery packages. It was introduced in 1911 and sold for 25 cents.

Other more elaborate and expensive Parker Brothers stores were filled with packages on shelves, and had counters, scales, cash registers, toy money, sacks of flour, jugs, coffee grinders, safes, and real glass show windows with a removable forest green sign at the top imprinted "Toy Town Grocery Store. They came in five sizes that sold for 50 cents, $1, $2, $3, and $5 depending on their size and contents; the largest measuring 24½x11¼x16-inches, had glass windows, and came equipped with a bucket, tub, and molasses jug.

Send questions to Anita Gold, P.O. Box 597401, Chicago, IL 60659. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a copy of this column and the name of the paper in which it appears for a reply.

Novel Porcelain Figurines Intrigue Collectors

Along with the hundreds of porcelain figurines of people, birds and animals created in the 18th and 19th century there were also novelties. These rarities, even those made in the late 19th century can cost more than $6,000 in a shop. Among them the figure of a nodding oriental figure and a complete Meissen monkey band.

Johann Joachim Kandler, probably the best-known Meissen porcelain modeler, created the first European animal and people figurines in the mid-18th century.

Experts believe Kandler made more than a thousand different figures and figural groups.

Needless to say they have been copied and faked ever since. Aside from the familar crinoline figures (ladies and nobles) are whimsical animal sculptures, and deformed figures made after the engravings by the French artist Jacques Callot.

The most famous animal group is the "Affenkapelle" or "monkey band." It consists of a complete orchestra of 21 monkey musician figures, complete with a conductor.

It was originally designed around 1750 with both humorous male and female monkeys.

CLUES: During the 18th century monkeys dressed as humans were popular motifs. They have never lost their appeal. And, they were reproduced and copied at such factories as Vienna, Chelsea, and Derby. Kandler's originals are more detailed, as he studied the animals in Augustus Rex's royal zoo.

The Meissen figures were press-molded with hollow interiors. Close examination of this underside will show an unevenness and rough patches, even fingerprints of the craftsmen.

Frankenthal, another German porcelain manufacture (1755-1800) made more than 800 different figures that are popular with today's collectors. They are best known for elaborate musical party and court scenes as well as the proverbial ballet dancer. When the factory closed, the figures were reproduced at the Nyphenburg factory.

The porcelain made at Capodimonte between 1743 and 1759 is eagerly sought by collectors who can afford it. Unfortunately most of the figures that come to market were made in the late 19th and early 20th century. The Italian comedy figures series are relatively rare. Many are unmarked. The dwarf figures, after the engravings of Callot, were made in the Cozzi factory in Venice, and are also unmarked. The popular Napoleon figures that often have a Capodimonte mark were heavily faked and reproduced in the 20th century.

In the late 18th century the Derby factory in England made a series of Italian comedy figures, based on the original Meissen pieces. They are unmarked. Unlike the original Meissen figures the colors were less vivid. Clues to their origin may be found in three or four patch marks on the bottom. These were caused by the clay props that held them in place in the kiln. They may or may not be marked with a capital D.

Various design influences of the time usually dictated the subjects of the figures. The interest in the Orient resulted in English, French and German figures with Oriental features and dress. Among them the nodding figures. When unmarked they can confuse novice collectors. Periodically individual figures of the monkey band turn up, usually from the late 19th to early 20th century. Many collectors have collected the band pieces over the years and one at a time from many makers.

Veneman Announces Grants For Ag Marketing Projects

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman recently announced 28 matching grants totaling $1.3 million to 20 states and American Samoa to support agricultural market research and demonstration projects.

"Federal-State Marketing Improvement Program grants support the development of new market opportunities for our nation's food and agricultural products," Agriculture Secretary Ann M. Veneman said. "The program encourages research and innovations to improve the efficiency and performance of our agricultural marketing system."

The grants involve a wide spectrum of commodities and address a number of important marketing topics and issues, including new markets, direct marketing, evaluation of consumer preferences, export opportunities, economic analysis, transportation, distribution and improving producers' marketing and business skills to enhance their ability to succeed in the market.

USDA awarded the following grants:

American Samoa - $62,900 to the American Samoa Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with American Samoa Community College, to develop a comprehensive data base on fresh fruit and vegetable supply, marketings, and imports, and establish a system for collecting the data annually.

Florida - $64,500 to the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to explore domestic and international markets for a new sweet, early maturing grapefruit hybrid; and to address marketing issues such as packaging, labeling, handling, and consumer acceptance of nopalitos, a minimally processed cactus product popular in Mexican cuisine.

Hawaii - $50,000 to the Hawaii Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with the University of Hawaii at Manoa, to study the economic impact of factors such as geographic location, transportation rates and regulations, industry structure, and product selection and differentiation on the competitiveness of selected Hawaii agricultural products destined for mainland domestic markets.

Illinois - $72,650 to the Illinois Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with Sustain, a Chicago based public interest group, to determine the infrastructure and resources needed to support the growth and maintenance of an Illinois-based organic distribution system.

Indiana - $49,000 to the Indiana Office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, in cooperation with Ball State University and others, to evaluate consumer response to web-based direct marketing of Indiana agricultural products, and communicate the findings to producers to optimize their marketing strategies.

Iowa - $46,500 to the Iowa Department of Agriculture and Land Stewardship, in cooperation with the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection, the Agricultural Utilization Research Institute of Minnesota, and Cooperative Development Services to conduct market research and a pre-feasibility analysis on collaborative approaches to marketing meat byproducts, and to provide business planning and product development assistance to the region's small scale meat processors.

Maine - $50,000 to the Maine Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with the University of Maine, Coastal Enterprises, Incorporated, Farms for the Future, the Maine Agricultural Center, University of Maine Cooperative Extension and others to explore new marketing channels for the state's dairy farmers.

Maryland - $22,675 to the Maryland Department of Agriculture to assist Maryland producers access new direct marketing opportunities in nearby urban markets.

Massachusetts - $93,100 to the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, in cooperation with the Cranberry Marketing Committee, the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers Association, and the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers Association to identify new markets for fresh and processed cranberries and cranberry products; and, in cooperation with the University of Massachusetts, to foster direct marketing of locally-grown ethnic produce to Asian and Brazilian immigrant communities in eastern Massachusetts.

Michigan - $96,615 to the Michigan Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with Michigan State University, Michigan Blueberry Growers, and others to study and compare post-harvest handling protocols to address microbial contamination; and, in cooperation with the Michigan State University Extension Service and several county farm bureaus, to complete a state-wide assessment of the compost market to gauge the economic feasibility of a regional compost processing facility.

Minnesota - $69,000 to the Minnesota Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with the Minnesota Shippers Association, the Minnesota Soybean Research and Promotion Council, and the University of Minnesota to explore opportunities for direct marketing northern soybeans as a feed for poultry in selected overseas markets.

Missouri - $66,450 to the Missouri Department of Agriculture to improve opportunities for Missouri agribusinesses to expand sales to state food service purchasers, and, in cooperation with the Missouri Enterprise Business Assistance Center, to prepare a training handbook for the state's timber industry to address business practices for improving profitability.

nly more expensive?
Doesn't it seem like the bigger tractors get, the more difficult the controls are to understand?
Fortunately, that's not a problem with the MF 6200 and MF 8200 Series tractors. We work hard to give you the controls to get your work done quickly and efficiently, so you don't spend the day working hard to understand your controls.
You therefore can have more time to deal with the bugs, weeds, diseases, crop planning and, of course, that VCR of yours.

Portable Tractor Saw

Cut cordwood, pulpwood, firewood, ties or any other type of wood anywhere Hook it up to your 3 point hitch, attach the PTO and move the Woodsman Saw to any location. As soon as you place a log on the sturdy 40" table, you'll get the feel of balanced-torque action A light hand pressure moves the log into the blade, release the pressure and the spring loaded table rocks back on dual roller bearings, ready for the next cut. Built on a rugged steel frame, the Model 250 is engineered for years of heavy duty use

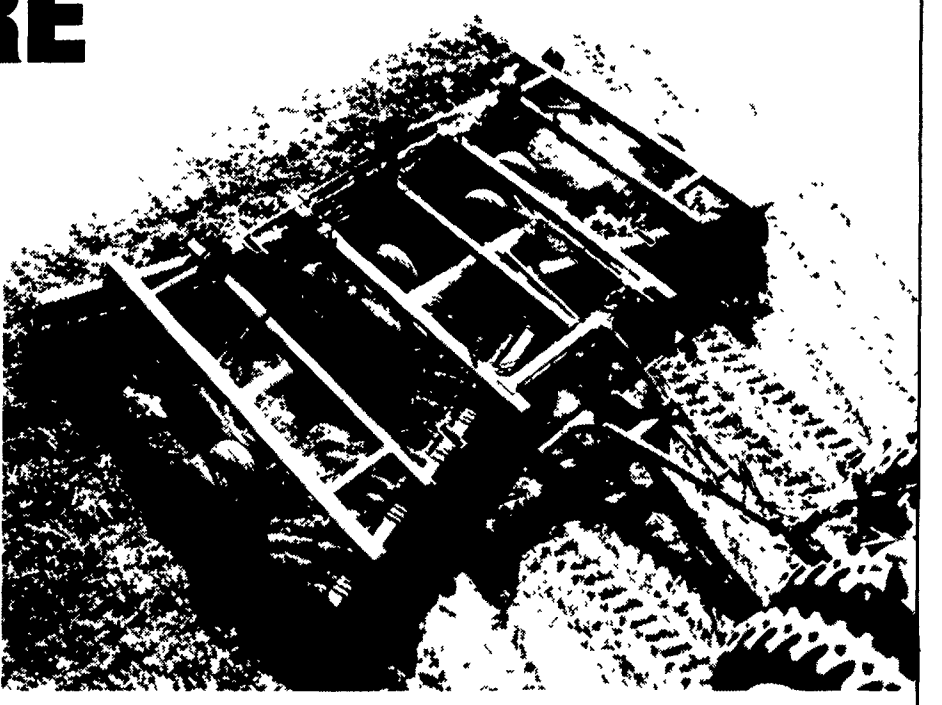
KRAUSE DISCS ARE BUILT TO LAST.



3 SOLID REASONS TO INVEST IN A DEPENDABLE KRAUSE DISC FOR YOUR FARM

The Original Rockflex Disc

Krause engineered the first "Rockflex" disc in 1965. Krause 7300 & 7400 discs are built tough and incorporate Rockflex bearing arms that protect your disc in all types of soil and field conditions.

Durability

Krause 7300 & 7400 discs are built from a foundation of structural steel strength and are ready to take on years of your toughest tillage. The frames are backed with a full three-year limited warranty, so you can be confident in the durability of Krause.

Resale Value

Krause 7300 & 7400 discs are built with quality components, and no disc on the market today maintains its value better than a Krause disc. When you go to sales to watch a disc sell, you'll find out that Krause discs always bring top dollar.

Input Sought On Revision Of Ag Machinery Standard

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — The American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) invites interested parties to participate in a project to revise its engineering standard S366.1, Dimensions for Cylindrical Couplers for Agricultural Tractors.

The proposed revision will incorporate the majority of the specifications and information included in International Standard ISO 5675:1992(E), Agricultural tractors and machinery — General purpose quick-action hydraulic couplers. According to ASAE Standards Director Scott Cedarquist, the proposed revision will define the following: the shape and dimensions in the area beyond the cylindrical area to allow for dust protection, the requirements for the 20 mm size coupling and the requirements for verifying pressure rating. An identical adoption of ISO 5675:1992(E) is not being proposed at this time due to a limited number of deviations between the current ASAE and ISO documents.

The draft is currently being reviewed by an ASAE technical committee. To ensure technically accurate and well-balanced documents, ASAE encourages input from affected parties. Participants in ASAE standards development are usually engineers, but non-engineers, especially farmers, are valued for their practical experience with engineered equipment and structures. Persons interested in learning more about the project or participating in the revisions should contact Scott Cedarquist at ASAE Headquarters, (269) 428-6331, cedarq@asae.org.

"Schering-Plough Animal Health is committed to serving the cattle industry, whether it is dairy or beef," said senior Product Manager Steve Brecher.

OSBORNE, Kan. — Osborne Industries, Inc. announced the publication of a new company Website: www.osborne-ind.com. According to the Osborne Marketing Department, the new Website is designed for easy navigation with up-to-date information about Osborne's products and services.

The site includes a "WHAT'S NEW" page where press releases, magazine articles, research papers, new additions to the Website, and special sales promotions are posted.

"We wanted to provide our visitors with easy navigation and up-to-date information about the significant research Osborne has done in support of its products and services," said Ron Thibault, VP Marketing. "Adding content was difficult with our previous Website, so we totally recreated the site to gain flexibility."

Veterinary Biologics Group Elects Officers

AMES, Iówa — During the eighth annual meeting of the Association of Veterinary Biologics Companies (AVBC), the following officers were elected and installed for the coming year: president, Clifford Frank, Synbiotics Corporation; vice president, Ralph Slaughter, BIOCOR Animal Health, Inc.; secretary, Robert Tully, Biomune, Inc.; and treasurer, Mary Lou Chapek, MVP Laboratories, Inc.

AVBC is a national trade association representing the manufacturers of veterinary vaccines and other immunological products which are regulated by USDA's Center for Veterinary Biologics (CVB) located in Ames.

Three new members were accepted into AVBC during the meeting. They are ADViSYS, Inc., of the Woodlands, Texas, ARS, Inc., of St. Louis, Mo., and Tanner Consulting of Ames, Iowa. ARS and Tanner are consultants, and ADViSYS is seeking its first veterinary biologics license.

Liquid Fertilizer Package Added To KINZE 3650 Planter

WILLIAMSBURG, Iowa — Want liquid fertilizer with your large-capacity narrow row planter? On the same toolbar? With narrow transport? Of course, with consistent depth control and precision seed placement? KINZE has added the 3650 Twin-Line® Conventional Model with individual seed hoppers to complement the 3650 Bulk Fill Model (introduced last year) with it's on-board bulk seed distribution system.

"No problem," said KINZE Marketing Manager Dennis Whitehead recently, as he introduced the new KINZE 3650 Twin-Line® Planters in 12 Row N (30-inch) and 16 Row N (30-inch) sizes. Both sizes are available with both Liquid Fertilizer Packages and narrow row Interplant® Systems.

According to Whitehead, the Liquid Fertilizer and Interplant Package combination is a "first" for larger planters. "The key is to maintain good balance and weight distribution," Whitehead stated. "Any time you add extra weight and attachments to the toolbar, especially on larger capacity planters, balance and weight distribution must be factored in. Otherwise, you end up compromising critical areas like consistent depth control or stability in transport. Ideally, we like to see hitch weights around 3,000 pounds and, of course, a well balanced toolbar — front to rear and side to side." And Whitehead added, "KINZE 3650 models are the only large, multi-task combination planters that can also negotiate a 12-foot gate."

Additional row unit attachments include no till coulters, residue wheels, disc furrowers and granular chemical attachments with a variety of chemical banding choices.

Complete electric/hydraulic control of row markers, point row clutches and folding/unfolding functions are handled right from the tractor seat. Electronic seed monitors are available for standard rows and Interplant Systems. Tough, durable power-coat paint maximizes protection and fade resistance.

Pullets Unlimited Renamed Wenger Feeds Pullet Services

RHEEMS (Lancaster Co.) — Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc. recently announced that its pullet division, Pullets Unlimited, will be renamed "Wenger Feeds Pullet Services."

Wenger Feeds Pullet Services has been operating under its previous name since 1985. The name change brings clarity to the corporate structure. "We want our customers to know that they can expect the same standard of quality and service from our pullet division as they currently receive from our feed division," noted Contract Coordinator Doug Stone.

Future brand extensions are planned at Wenger's in the upcoming year as the company identifies ways to better serve agriculture. Bringing Wenger's services together under the same name will aid the company in working towards the same good — serving the changing needs of its customers, the industry, and the community.

American Angus Association Creates Selection Tools With Dollars In Mind

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Beef producers today have access to a powerful list of genetic selection tools, primarily in the form of Expected Progeny Differences (EPDs). However, the wealth of information can become overwhelming when it's time to rank various herd sires for numerous performance measures. Fortunately, the dynamics of multi-trait selection indexes as tools for commercial cow-calf operators and seedstock breeders are rapidly evolving for the beef industry. These tools, when used as part of a complete breeding system encompassing all production arenas, can combine a set of EPDs into targeted economic values.

As an answer to this call for dynamic performance indicators, the American Angus Association Board of Directors recently approved the release of new tools for commercial producers to add simplicity to genetic selection decisions. The American Angus Association Spring 2004 Sire Evaluation Report will include the release of Total Beef Value ($B), the first in a suite of bio-economic values, expressed in dollars per head, to assist commercial beef producers. The $B values will be in the printed version of the Sire Evaluation Report and may be viewed and sorted by accessing the Sire Evaluation Search page at www.angussiresearch.com. Further enhancements to this technology will include an interactive website, where users can define postweaning and carcass parameters to create tailored $Values for their given scenario.

"Although carcass merit is an important component of the beef production chain, the Total Beef Value is not to be used as a single selection criterion, since it only combines postweaning and carcass industry segments," says Sally Dolezal, genetic research director for the Association. "The complete system of bio-economic values, or net merit system, will in the future also include comprehensive reproduction and weaned calf values."

$B encompasses the dollar per head progeny difference in combined postweaning and carcass merit. The $B value has two pieces: Feedlot Value ($F) and carcass Grid Value ($G). The values are calculated for animals with growth trait EPDs and end-product predictions (carcass EPDs, ultrasound EPDs, or both). The Feedlot Value ($F) assigns a $ per head difference in expected progeny performance to postweaning genetic merit. The Grid Value ($G) combines quality grade and yield grade attributes, and is calculated for animals with carcass EPDs, ultrasound EPDs, or both types of EPDs. $B facilitates what almost every beef breeder is already seekingsimultaneous multi-trait genetic improvement for feedlot and carcass merit, based on dollars and cents.

Real-world economics of this $Value concept are a powerful addition to the already sizable list of 17 EPDs currently available through the American Angus Association. The $Values were derived using available EPDs, converted into economic terms using industry relevant components for feedlot performance (i.e. days on feed, ration cost, cash price, etc.) and carcass merit (i.e. choice-select spread, heavyweight and YG 4 & 5 discounts, etc.). These new tools provide commercial producers, along with seedstock breeders, an avenue to simplify the use of EPDs, evaluating feedlot and carcass separately or simultaneously.

Details on the $B will be available online at www.angus.org during the release of the American Angus Association Spring 2004 Sire Evaluation Report. Questions can be directed to the American Angus Association Performance Programs Department at ahir@angus.org or (816) 383-5100.

The American Angus Association, with headquarters in St. Joseph, Mo., is the world's largest beef breed organization, providing programs and services to thousands of commercial producers and more than 34,000 members nationwide.

EPA Review Clears Path For Atrazine

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Oct. 31, announced a favorable re-registration decision for the herbicide atrazine, paving the way for its continued use by American farmers for effective weed control in corn, grain sorghum, sugar cane, and other crops.

"This decision confirms what extensive scientific studies have shown-that atrazine meets the most stringent regulatory safety standards," said Mike Mack, president of Syngenta Crop Protection Inc.

In a teleconference to discuss highlights of its amended Interim Re-registration Eligibility Decision (IRED), EPA restated earlier conclusions — including identifying atrazine as "not likely" to cause cancer in humans — and outlined an innovative, first-of-its-kind program to monitor the health of ecosystems in streams most vulnerable to runoff.

U.S. farmers have relied on atrazine for 45 years for cost-effective, broadleaf weed control in corn, grain sorghum, and sugar cane. According to Doane, it is the second most popular herbicide in the U.S. Data from the USDA show that atrazine is the most widely used herbicide in conservation tillage systems, which can reduce soil erosion by as much as 90 percent.

DuPont Becomes Sole Owner Of Griffin LLC

WILMINGTON, Del. — DuPont announced, Nov. 5, that it has acquired Griffin Corporation's interest in Griffin LLC, thereby becoming the sole owner. Financial terms were not disclosed.

The purchase will enable DuPont Crop Protection to provide its customers with a broader product portfolio in key segments, including cotton, fruit, vegetable, and professional products. Griffin LLC has five manufacturing sites in North and South America.

James C. Borel, president, DuPont Crop Protection said, "This action is consistent with our objective to grow our specialty markets business globally, and these additions to our portfolio will help us serve customers better."

Dairy Sire Evaluations Available On Website

PLAIN CITY, Ohio — Dairy producers who are looking for a quick, convenient way to obtain accurate production and type results from the quarterly dairy sire evaluatinos issued by the USDA, Interbull, and breed associations, Nov. 10, now can turn to a single source www.selectsires.com.

This Website will carry the latest production and type data for all dairy breeds represented in the Select Sires lineup. At that time, the site also will contain new type-composite information for Select's Holstein lineup as well as pictures showing daughters of many sires.

The Website also will offer a virtual sire directory for each dairy breed. One virtual-directory feature enables producers to easily sort the sires by milk, protein, type, and Type-Production Index (TPI). Convenient links help them look at detailed information on each sire, including his proof, linear type data, and photograph. In addition, many individual pages show pictures of daughters.

All of the information on www.selectsires.com is available free to producers and others who are interested in obtaining up-to-date data about leading dairy sires.

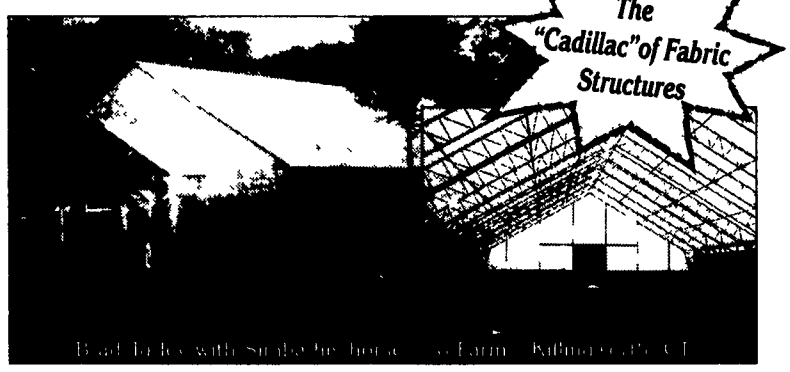
You Must Hear what Brad says:

"I couldn't be more pleased with my riding arena!"



"I knew what I wanted and I found it! After extensive research I knew I needed a fabric structure from We Cover. The facts that made my decision were:

"The Engineering – when I saw their heavy built trusses and engineered drawings, I knew their building would hold up to the Atlantic Coastal winds and snow

"The Lighting – I can ride my horse in the natural light with no shadows to spook my horse

"The Design – The Building has straight side walls giving me plenty of clearance for riding. The fabric is in 12' panels and each panel is tightened by a ratchet system. Add to the this the convenient overhang and a sensible ventilation system. These excellent features combined with the many options of this building package make it a real winner!

"My local building engineer is so impressed, he says he will never again recommend a traditional building for an indoor riding arena. "I recommend you call We Cover today!"

The strength, integrity, and appearance of a solid building along with the lighting and construction advantages of a fabric structure.

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:

- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED
is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.
